Home. Your home is a reflection of your own unique sense of style. Each piece of furniture, every fabric, drapery or pattern is a statement of your individuality. That's why interior designer William Hulsman created Bill Hulsman Ready-to-Wear Home Fashions. He's filled his store with beautifully designed furniture, lighting, rugs, bedding and home accessories just waiting for you to make your own. Choose from the nearly limitless supply of fabrics to custom upholster that sofa or chair, or to create that drapery or pillow. Reasonably priced and available in 30 days, they're created for you and can't be found anywhere else. So, let Bill assist you in creating your own unique environment. After all, there's only one you.

"Hairspray" Broadway Matinee
Wed., June 11th
$160 pp.

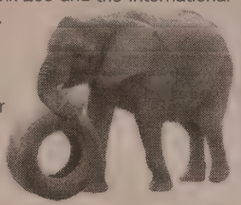
Jack O'Brien directed this musical that is set in Baltimore in 1962. Hairspray is the story of plain-jane Tracy Turnblad, who is going to do whatever it takes to dance her way onto TV's most popular show. Can a big girl with big dreams — and even bigger hair — turn the whole town around? Hairspray the musical is based on John Water's 1988 film classic. Starring Marissa Jaret Winokur and Harvey Fierstein. Package includes Mezzanine ticket, lunch at UN Delegates Dining room and round-trip transportation.

"Gypsy" Broadway Matinee
Wed., July 16th
$150 pp.

A consummate show-biz musical suggested by the memoirs of stripper Gypsy Rose Lee, who was once plain old Louise, the awkward daughter of an unstoppable stage mother and sister to "Dainty June," a star child of a minor vaudeville circuit. Score includes "Some People," "Let Me Entertain You," "Together," "Everything's Coming Up Roses," and "All I Need Is The Girl." It stars Bernadette Peters. Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at B. Smith's and round-trip transportation.

"Zooventure" at the Bronx Zoo
Sat., June 21st
$45 pp.

Visit the world famous Bronx Zoo and the International Wildlife Conservation Park. Package includes: general admission, round-trip Zoo Shuttle, Bengali Express Monorail, Skyfari Cable Car (one-way), Children's Zoo, World of Darkness, World of Reptiles, Jungle World, Congo Exhibit, Butterfly Exhibit and round-trip motorcoach transportation.



NY Yankees Vs. Cleveland Indians
Thurs., July 17th
$58 pp.
$45 pp/kids under 12 & seniors 60+

Game Time: 7:05 p.m.
Package Includes: Round-trip transportation and loge box game tickets.

Wed., July 9th
$70 pp.

No Jeans or Sneakers

Enjoy an exciting day at beautiful Belmont Race Track. Package Includes: round-trip transportation, Club-house admission, racing program and a buffet lunch at the Garden Terrace restaurant overlooking the track.This is a fabulous deal. Dress is semi-formal: jackets for men; dresses, skirts or pantsuits for ladies.

Branson 8-Day Tour
Fri., Sept. 5th-Fri., Sept. 12th
$1079 pp., dbl. occ.

Please call for a complete itinerary and details.

Enjoy an 8-day adventure to world famous Branson Missouri with sight-seeing stops along the way! Package includes; 7-night hotel accommodation, taxes and baggage handling. 7 full breakfasts, 1 lunch, 5 dinners, Branson Bell Lunch Show, 4 theatre shows, admission to the Gateway Arch and Precious Moments and Backstage tour at the Welk Theatre.

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Boycott Is Ended

Action Against Dan's Papers And Its Advertisers Is Called Off

By Dan Rattiner

A boycott called against the advertisers of Dan's Papers on April 23 has collapsed. It did so after an article appeared in Dan's Papers about the original boycott, numerous e-mails and a subsequent letter from Cass Almendral of Manhattan, who originally called for the boycott.

Almendral runs Cassworld.com, a large Web site that puts together share houses in the Hamptons. He has thousands of contacts among the young single people in Manhattan and also has numerous contacts among potential advertisers in the Hamptons, some of whom receive value-added publicity at venues around the city where Cass runs singles events.

"I am so pissed!" Cass wrote in his original call for the boycott on April 23. "My Vodka sponsor is considering advertising in Dan's Papers. Dan's Papers not only writes disparaging articles against New Yorkers who do share houses, they also include a form to fill-out so readers can report all share houses to the police! They cite a law that it's illegal to rent a house in the Hamptons to five or more un-married people. They are selectively discriminating against single people!... Let's boycott and stop spending money on Hamptons restaurants, bars, clubs, stores, products, real estate agents, companies, etc. who advertise in Dan's Papers. Dan's sells ads by saying that hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers read their paper while they write articles saying we should be fined and arrested. They are screwing us from behind without the courtesy of a reach-around. Email me if you're a (sic) Ad buyer/Marketing/Brand Manager who wants to advertise in the Hamptons without using Dan's Papers..."

On May 5, Almendral wrote the following to call off his boycott.

"Last week Dan's Papers printed the 'CassWorld vs. Dan's Papers' e-mail I sent out with a scathing response in their magazine. I did read the article and now understand that Dan's Papers is strictly against obnoxious share houses and not single people renting summer homes.... There are a few unsavory characters who would enjoy seeing continued animosity between share houses and the Hamptons community. I don't support them. I say let's promote graciousness and understanding for the benefit of having a pleasant summer. The Hamptons have beautiful beaches, great homes, elegant parties and happy citizens living in a historic community. I'm with Dan on this. Let's keep it that way. I'll be organizing elegant lawn parties in Southampton this summer for my friends and business affiliates. I'll make sure to extend gracious invitations to our neighbors, people I know from Town Hall, the building inspectors, chamber of commerce people, the police chief and of course Dan of Dan's Papers."

> "I'll be organizing elegant lawn parties this summer... I'll make sure to extend gracious invitations to our neighbors... and, of course, Dan..."

If the call for the boycott had limited effect — last week Dan's Papers published an issue of almost 300 pages containing more advertising than at any other time in its 43-year history — the call for the boycott did result in a considerable debate both on the Internet and at Dan's Papers on the subject. Southampton Town, last summer, announced a crackdown on the out-of-control wild party situation in a few residential sections of our community, conducting pre-dawn raids where thirty or more people were sleeping in houses designed for single family occupancy. Several of these "share houses" were closed down within 24 hours. The Town passed new laws to keep them from re-opening in the coming years.

Dan's Papers supported this crackdown. In line with the Town's announcement that houses being put up for share house rental would be closely monitored, Dan's Papers published a coupon which local families were invited to fill in and send off to the Town. Some did. The quiet and safety of several neighborhoods was at stake.

Many people felt that the very future of the Hamptons as a largely family-oriented community was at stake. Some wrote letters saying so. In a subsequent article, published by this writer on May 4, we made it clear that we do not care if people are single, married or significantly othered, when they live forty to a house, keep everybody up all night, get drunk and cause property damage, we are against it. And we requested that potential advertisers make a choice — either join the boycott of Dan's Papers until we crumble under the pressure and editorially support this kind of behavior in our community (a not-too-likely change of our opinion), or stay loyal to the paper and support the Town. We also suggested that the boycott by those who behave this way be extended, not just to Dan's Papers, but to all the communities in the Hamptons. That could be an excellent solution to the problem.

One writer posted this comment on the Cass website.

"Class warfare has begun, ironically enough, in an economy where consumer dollars are even more scarce to come by these days. The closure of night spots and the threatened enforcement of local ordinances precluding those who are unrelated from cohabiting in share house arrangements may bring about an end to summer fun for many....I find it most hypocritical that locals out east would want to discourage the annual 'invasion' of middle and upper middle class Manhattanites who regularly spend the equivalent of the GNP of some small states over the course of the summer just to enjoy the beach and patronize their community....To Dan and his advertisers, we really don't read that rag as much as you think we do and if we did, you might realize that single people, often whom reside in share houses, spend a lot of money on the very businesses advertised. Let's play a game, for one summer close the Hamptons down to singles, let's see how many of your quaint little businesses go BANKRUPT."

Another writer posted this message on the Cass website about the boycott. "Could be a great pay-per-view with the proceeds going to purchase ideological jackboots in 'Town approved' colors for all the wanabe authoritarians."

Perhaps the definitive comment, however, came from a woman named Julie London who directed this letter to Almendral himself. The reference to the $2,500 for a "share" refers to the fact that, if you do the math, somebody running a share house for a summer can make about a hundred thousand dollars if they can get away with not having to repair holes in the walls, shattered windows and ripped up sofas, and so forth.

"You choose not to escalate this debate because Dan made you look like the buffoon that you are. It made me laugh further when you said you were going to continue to arrange elegant lawn parties...like you have ever arranged one of those or anything elegant in any way. In the backyard of that rundown firetrap of a house? With 3 or 4 people gouged for a high share house price of $2,400 for 8 crowded weekends and 4 stuffed in each room? How many times have the police been called on you? Oh, about 4 times a summer. Bands in the back-

My Boat

Adventure With A Boat In East Hampton Without Leaving The Dock

By Dan Rattiner

May was the month when all us yachtsmen got our vessels in the water, steered them to our slips and made them fast to the cleats on the dock with nylon lines. Usually, we make fast to the dock using a knot called a half hitch.

You will notice I use nautical terminology. This is with great effort. After twenty-five years of owning boats, what I did, and do, is get my boat in the water, have somebody show me how to start it because I forgot since last year, drive it to the place where it goes and tie it up with a rope. I don't know from hitches. I just try different knots until it doesn't keep sliding off and doesn't look funny.

Some of us are boat people. Summer knot. I ain't one of them, but I like being out on the water. I like it enough so that last summer I went out in my boat once.

Anyway, for the past few years, I have tied up at the big dock in front of my house where the large yachts tie up. It is right there close to my house. So I can go to my living room slider with a dinner guest, point at it and say, "See? That's my boat."

Some of us are boat people. Summer knot. I ain't one of them, but I like being out on the water.

This pompousness has had its costs. The tide goes in and out and the water goes up and down, so on some occasions I have to climb down this long wooden ladder to get to the boat. Furthermore, the slip is far too big for my boat. It is thirty feet from the shore to the pilings. So to secure this little sixteen-foot water ski boat so that it doesn't bump into the big boats on either side, I have had to set up elaborate ropes and pulleys so it sort of remains suspended in its space. You set it up at low tide when the ropes could be pretty tight. Then, when the tide rises, the ropes slacken a bit. You have to get it just right. And then you haul on the ropes leading out to the pulleys hand-over-hand and the boat comes to shore.

This year, though, the marina said they had a slip available for me at the floating dock, which is farther from the house, but which would allow much easier access for me and my friends to get in and out. They said this really made far more sense for my little boat. I said I would try it.

They put my boat in the water and last Saturday, after getting Phil to show me again how to start it up, I got in and motored it from the shore across to the floating dock to tie it up. On the way, I noticed I sure had a lot of ropes and pulleys lying around on the seats in the back. Indeed, there were maybe eight of them, all different lengths. It was the elaborate rig I had been using in the big boat slip.

My voyage to the floating dock was successful and so I immediately set out arranging all these ropes and pulleys where they needed to go to keep the boat in its new place without banging around against its (now smaller) neighbors. On the other hand, the distance out to the piling here is only ten feet, so the ropes weren't really the right length. And because I didn't have a knife or a scissors with me, it took me the better part of an hour to select various ropes that could approximate a particular length in the new slip. In the end, I got the rig set up and working, but it sure was a mess of nylon ropes and clothesline and blue waterskiing towlines and so forth and so on, crisscrossing my boat. There were loops and knots where there weren't supposed to be any. There were frayed parts of different ropes. It was a real Rube Goldberg contraption.

Anyway, after 25 years I am very familiar with where the line of the water is on the shore, and from what I could see it was pretty near low tide, so, with the sun beginning to set, finally, I went home.

I was telling this story to somebody the next morning, about how this rig was such an embarrassment I really had to go back there with a scissors and knife and some fabric tape for the ends and make it right, when they said I should ask the marina if they had something called "frogs legs." They were a bit pricey, but they could extend when the tide went out and retract when the tide came in and all you had to do was unhook them in two places and fold them over and off you went.

So the next morning, which was Monday, I called the marina and asked them about Frogs Legs. They never heard of them, they said, but they had something like them that would pretty much do the same thing.

"How much are they?" I asked.

"Aren't you at the floating dock?" they asked.

"Yes, but I made a real mess with the pulleys and everything and all the different kinds of ropes and I really want to get this thing in as soon as I can. I think the tide is at its lowest in the morning this week."

"I saw what you did. Dan, you are at the floating dock."

"So?"

"The floating dock goes up and down. All you have to do is tie the boat to it."

There was about ten seconds of silence during which time I remembered wondering why none of the other boats at the floating dock had elaborate rigs as they did at the big dock.

"Oh," I said.

"I'm not so sure I want to go out with you driving your boat," my significant other said after hearing this story.

"Why not?"

"Sounds like it could be really dangerous."

"It's just the opposite of dangerous," I said. "You know those people who drive at forty miles an hour on the superhighway way over in the right lane? That's me. I'll give you an example. If its dinner time and you want to take the boat from Three Mile Harbor to Sag Harbor to one of the restaurants there, halfway there, as you come up to Barcelona Point, you have to look out for a large rock that juts out of the water at low tide. At high tide it's a few feet under water. So you definitely want to avoid it. On the other hand, it is very well marked on nautical maps, and I know exactly where it is, and there is a buoy on the water with a flag on it to mark it. So you know what this means to me?"

"You never go to Sag Harbor?"

"Right."

My late father, who used to fish off Montauk for blues in the autumn in his boat and who knew I was a complete idiot when it came to nautical matters, told me I ought to write a book about all the things I know about boating.

With These Rockefellers, You Make Your Choice And Take Your Chances

By Dan Rattiner

Crime does not pay, particularly if you are a charming Frenchman named Christopher Rocancourt who absolutely believes his bilking of several million dollars from some trusting "friends" is not illegal. He's written a book about it. Didn't help.

Rocancourt, 35, breezed into the Hamptons during the summer of 2000 with a paid entourage of aides, chauffeurs and bodyguards who helped create the image that an incredible amount of wealth swirled around him. He and his entourage stayed at the Pink House B&B in East Hampton for awhile and later at the Mill Garth B&B in Amagansett. He signed the ledger, or had one of his aides sign the register, "Christopher Rockefeller." Of course they gave him credit. Wouldn't you? When it was over, he left unpaid bills that, together at these two bed and breakfast establishments, totaled more than $19,000. (How do you run up $19,000 in charges at a bed and breakfast?) Three years later, he still has not paid these bills, although last week a Brooklyn judge ordered him to.

He signed the ledger, or had one of his aides sign the register, "Christopher Rockefeller." Of course they gave him credit. Wouldn't you?

While here, "Mr. Rockefeller" bilked at least five different people out of between $14,000 and $300,000 dollars. In each case, he befriended these people, expressed sympathy when told privately they were a bit short of cash and worried about it, and said that he would help them out. Because of his connections as a cousin in the Rockefeller clan, he could arrange investments for them in "sure thing" stocks that his family knew about.

After each of these people, a Manhattan stock broker, an East Hampton attorney, a masseuse and a Wall Street investor and his fiancé got over the wonderfulness of such a man, he told them, apologetically, that in order to share in such noble largess, they would have to give him up-front money to show that they were "real" people who, someday, could pay this money back. People reached into their pockets.

"Rockefeller" played this out pretty good, giving his assistants notes, and having them call other associates on their cell phones and so forth and so on, but he had problems with details. For example, he invited one woman to play tennis with him at his "club," but at the appointed time had his assistant phone her to say she should meet him at the public court in the park behind the stores in the center of downtown East Hampton because all the courts at his "club" were booked.

After awhile, and particularly when the bed and breakfast people began to get a bit itchy, the police moved in and arrested him (and one of his aides with the cell phone.) The next morning, however, in a court snafu, he was charged only with the relatively minor infraction of bilking the B&Bs, and released on $45,000 bail. He was gone before the mistake was discovered.

Among those amazed at this was the lawyer he had retained, Bruce Cutler, who is the Brooklyn lawyer who often defends Mafia types (he defended John Gotti). Cutler told the court he was sure that once Rocancourt realized he had been let go by mistake, he would surely show up in the courthouse again. He had, after all, put up $45,000 in bail, which he would now lose. (But he had already gotten more than $200,000 of various Hamptons residents' money.) He also owed Cutler money. Cutler also said he had never heard of a person he represented running out on bail.

Anyway, a manhunt began to find this man, and it finally ended a year later when a couple at a ski lodge in a town outside of Vancouver, Canada, complained to authorities that they had been bilked of $150,000 by a "Rockefeller." Canadian Mounted Police moved in, arrested Rocancourt and, in searching his hotel room, discovered material that led them to several prior swindles in the United States, one of which was out here in the Hamptons.

Rocancourt served one year in a Canadian jail waiting to be extradited to New York. During that time, he wrote a book entitled Orphan, Playboy, Convict. In the book, he explained that it was not he who had done anything wrong but the people he approached and got loans from. How would anybody possibly believe a former street urchin from a fishing village in Normandy could be a Rockefeller? He had had a tough time growing up. He had had to live by his wits. He could not help it if, now as an adult, he was still living by his wits. And indeed, he did not consider he had taken anything. It was all borrowed. It would be returned some day.

This defense did not fly, of course. Rocancourt, faced with a possible jail sentence that could be as high as twenty years with all his escapades added together, agreed to a plea bargain. He will serve three or four years in an American jail, with the time already served in Canada deducted, then face deportation. He is to be given immunity from further prosecution for these crimes he has committed, though he will certainly be responsible for any future crimes that he commits, if any. He also must pay restitution, an amount so far tallied at between $1 and $2 million, to the people he bilked.

But does he have any money anymore? His lawyer, Victor Sherman said, "Any money he's got is gone. He has an ex-wife, he has a child, he has lawyers."

Perhaps the book will sell well. Perhaps he will get movie rights. •

Marketing Libeskind

Turns Out The Planned "Wedge Of Light" Is "A Wedge Of Dark"

By Dan Rattiner

Daniel Libeskind's design for the new World Trade Center was not the best one, you know. The best one was the design from the "United" team. It looked very much like the Libeskind design, only better. And that was because my nephew, architect Jesse Reiser, was on the team. I've known him since he was on a tricycle growing up in Dobb's Ferry. From what I can see, he's never done anything but first-rate work. Certainly the work he did for the "United" entry was.

The reason they chose Libeskind's entry, of course, was because of all the press conferences and public relations that Libeskind arranges to swirl around him wherever he goes. He's such an unusual looking guy, about 5 feet 4, his head too big for his body, and always with this big smile on his face. Everybody loves him. His entry would be exactly 1,776 feet high, in celebration of the year 1776, when this country was founded. Also, Libeskind made his design so that his two biggest skyscrapers would frame a special plaza that would always be in shadow except for a three hour period, from 8:46 a.m. to 10:28 a.m. every September 11, when it would be bright with sunshine. Thus, this "wedge of light," as they called it would be visible precisely from when the first plane hit until the second tower fell. A tribute to the victims of 9/11 and a bright triumph for the future.

How could Libeskind lose? He couldn't.

Now it turns out that Libeskind didn't do his calculations correctly. They have, however, been done correctly by another architect, Eli Atta, who not only doesn't like Libeskind, but didn't like his design or his mathematics. Atta went ahead and did his own calculations, considering the earth's rotation, the angle of the sun, the time of day, the positioning of the buildings and their height — all known factors — and concluded that the truth was the plaza would be in shadow, not sunshine, every morning of 9/11.

Libeskind has now acknowledged that the space will be in shadow. But when asked for an explanation, he waffled into architecto-speak.

"I never intended to create anything different," he said. "The Wedge of Light is created by the effect of the facades of the building reflecting the light back into the plaza. It is a three dimensional phenomenon about the ambience of light and the reflections of light between the buildings."

Doesn't sound like sunshine to me. And it won't sound like sunshine to Governor Pataki who, in a recent speech, hailed the design specifically for its "spectacular entranceway to the site, the Wedge of Light — where the sun will shine without shadow the morning of every September 11."

I think Libeskind would have been wise, before he spoke, to have consulted the marketing and PR people who accompanied him so successfully through the selection process (to defeat, among others, my nephew.) They might have put an entirely different and certainly comprehensible spin on this.

"What I said was that the Wedge of Light would stay in shadow," Libeskind might have said, "as we bow our heads in remembrance of those who gave their lives that day. I don't know how it got so misunderstood."

Much better, that.

These marketing and PR people will also aid him when it turns out that there isn't enough money to go up the full 1,776 feet. It might go up only 1,773 feet, which Libeskind could explain is a celebration of the anniversary of the Boston Tea Party when rebellion against the English king was first attempted. The tower might only go up 1,620 feet, which Libeskind could explain celebrates the first settlers landing at Plymouth Rock, or it might go up only 1,492 feet, which would be, well, you know the answer to that.

All of this is really going to piss off Eli Atta who has made a year-long crusade of crucifying the Libeskind design. Atta wants Libeskind's design scrubbed. He wants an international competition to be held with the winner to be decided by a panel of distinguished architects. When releasing the information about the truth of the shadows on the plaza, Atta sent out a press release.

"Whether by ignorance, neglect or deceit, Daniel Libeskind and the Lower Manhattan Development Corporation have sought to sell the citizens of New York, America, and the world — including the families who have trusted Libeskind for inspiration — a figment and a sham memorial in which the defining image and metaphor is shadows conquering the light."

Like I said, the one they should have chosen was the one with the design my nephew worked on.

My mother and Jesse's mother agree with this assessment, by the way. •

War Over

Real Estate War Ends But An East Hampton House May Be Lost

By Dan Rattiner

One of the most celebrated real estate feuds in the Hamptons is coming to an end, and the loser might be an architectural gem of East Hampton, a private residence in that town on the shore of Georgica Pond designed by the celebrated modern architect Gordon Bunshaft. It was erected in 1963. It will have stood just under half a century.

It is often true that houses, if they stay for sale for a long time unoccupied by their owners, can deteriorate into substandard conditions. Usually buyers take title to a house, and, thus assuming prideful ownership, spruce things up. If necessary, considerable expense can be justified on a house, particularly one that has graced magazine covers and has won all sorts of architectural awards, as this one has. Serene, simply designed and artful, this small one story house, just 2,500-square feet, was a landmark of design when it was constructed and a pivotal design in the work of Gordon Bunshaft.

In any case, six years ago, Martha Stewart, the lifestyle expert, purchased it. It was in need of repair when she bought it. It was also true that she had another house in East Hampton, a larger and classically built older home near the ocean on Lily Pond Lane. Perhaps she bought this second one to save it, perhaps she bought it to fix it up for her home design shoots. Whatever the reason, she sent in landscapers and construction workers and almost immediately discovered that the neighbor to her west, real estate developer Harry Macklowe, had been landscaping the property that separated his house from hers, and, according to survey maps that she possessed, were likely on her property. Also, it was horrendous work and she should know. He had ripped out indigenous grasses and plant life and he had replaced them with material that was, from Martha's perspective, what Dacron and sharkskin would have been to cotton and wool.

Martha went to court to get a stop work order against Harry Macklowe. Macklowe responded with charges of his own — Martha and her employees had been trespassing without his permission.

What ensued went on for four years, and involved suits, countersuits, court appearances, fines, appeals and various depositions. At one point, one of the participants built a tall wooden fence to separate the properties. At another point Ms. Stewart, finding gardeners employed by Macklowe working out front of her front gate, ordered them to leave and in the melee that ensued, accidentally struck one of them with her Land Rover while trying to leave.

Mrs. Stewart, who has houses in half a dozen communities in America, eventually abandoned the improvements she was making on the Bunshaft House, leaving a huge pile of dirt out front, which is there to this day. Meanwhile, the house deteriorated further and at this point, there is some question as to whether a new owner could save it at all. One observer commented that all that is left there is little more than the foundation and a bunch of walls that need to be pulled down. Stewart paid $3 million for the house in 1995, and has it listed with Cook Pony Farm of East Hampton for $12.5 million. A little fixer upper. But if fixed up an important architectural gem. •

The Hamptons Gets Discovered For Time On The Silver Screen

By Lise Visser and Catherine Gandel

Attention movie star wannabes: note that Dan's Papers lists all open casting calls in its Events section. This year there have been an unprecedented number of such opportunities.

Those of us who live in the Hamptons for any part of the year understand very well the magnetism of its beaches, the serenity of the farms, and the particular magic of the light in the morning and late afternoon. Given the onslaught of trucks, dressing rooms, cameras, crew and cast over the past few months, it might seem as if Hollywood has also finally discovered the benefits of the Hamptons.

It might seem as if Hollywood has finally discovered the benefits of the Hamptons.

Not quite. Seventy years before Baby Boomers and Gen-Xers, the movie biz knew a good thing when they saw it. The first film shot on the East End was the 1921 silent The Sheik starring Rudolph Valentino. East End dunes stood in for the sands of Arabia.

Fast forward to 2003. Over the past few months, two big-budget movies have filmed scenes in the area. In March, Jim Carey, and Kate Winslet worked on The Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind. More recently Jeff Bridges and Kim Basinger wrapped up Door in the Floor. In June, Jack Nicholson and Diane Keaton will be here to star in an as yet untitled project directed by Nancy Meyers whose last film was What Women Want.

It was probably a lot easier to arrange filming in 1921. The Famous Players-Lasky Studio based in Astoria just drove out to Montauk and set up their cameras. Today studios and production

CASTING CALL WITH JACK NICHOLSON & CO.

By Dan Rattiner

Even a driving rain could not keep people away from going to Guild Hall in East Hampton on Monday morning to try out for the new Diane Keaton and Jack Nicholson movie. Up for grabs at this casting call were walk on parts, stand in roles, background parts in crowd scenes. In other words, the usual.

The casting call was being conducted by Graham Wilfley Casting who three months ago ran a casting call seeking extras for the Jim Carrey movie Eternal Sunshine Of The Spotless Mind. That film was subsequently shot in various locations in our community and should be released sometimes this fall. The current film, which has yet to have a name but goes by "The Nancy Meyers Film Project," will be shooting out here in about two weeks with one scene on Main Street, another at a farm stand and a third at the beach. And yes, the stars will be here.

I talked to some people standing on line to be considered as extras. People signed in at a table in the lobby of the theater, and when the forms were filled out, went into the theater where a cameraman with a Polaroid would stand you up against a wall and ask you to smile, mugshot fashion. The resulting photo would then be stapled to the form filmed out. Where the form went after that, I do not know. To Nancy Meyers, perhaps.

"I just want to do this to get close to Jack Nicholson," one woman said. "Even if it's just for companies must apply to the towns or villages for permits. Costs vary, but one thing all insist on is additional insurance naming the town or village as an insured.

The East Hampton Town Supervisor's Executive Assistant, Eric Brown, handles the applications for the Town of East Hampton. Operations with fewer than five people do not have to get a permit. Others pay a $100 filing fee and between $100 and $250 a day.

Cooperation seems to be the order of the day. "We always try to sit down with studios and look at what's possible, where and when," says Brown. His counterpart in the Village, Larry Cantwell, Administrator for the Village of East Hampton, notes "If we can meet with the team well in advance, we can steer them in the right direction. If what they want to do isn't possible, we can suggest alternatives. But we can't work on short notice." The Village charges $250 for the permit, with additional fees if filming will take place in an area that will cause an undue burden on the Village.

If a studio wants to film in the Village of Southampton, the go-to guy is Village Administrator, James A. Van Nostrand. Fees: $500 the first day, $250 for each successive day. Rain dates are given, an important benefit considering the wet weather this past spring.

In the Town of Southampton, the rates depend on the size of the crew and the number of vehicles. For up to 30 cast members and ten vehicles, the cost is $500. Above that, the cost increases to $1000 a day. Sundy Schermeyer at the Southampton Town Department of Parks and Recreation is in charge of issuing permits for any activity that takes place in the Town, but sometimes the Town Trustees have to give approval for extraordinary requests. Last week the Trustees approved a request from the Nancy Meyers project via Bridgehampton-based Suffolk Environmental Consulting for permission to construct a cabana and to plant palm trees on Flying Point Beach, temporarily of course.

I live in Los Angeles for part of the year, and palm trees grow naturally there, plus there are miles of beach front that parallel the Pacific Coast Highway. So why come to a beach in the Hamptons to plant palm trees only to have to dig them up after two days? The answer is probably that movie people like to come to the Hamptons. Heck, some movie people even live here.

And generally speaking, the Hamptons like to host movie people. Although film crews can and often do disrupt life in the Hamptons, the economic benefit to local businesses is worth the aggravation. Within reason, that is.

"We say no if the work will impose an excessive burden on residents," says Sundy Schermeyer. Ms. Schermeyer was recently asked to approve a permit from a spin-off of one of the star-search TV shows. "They wanted permission to go up and down the beach with a camera on Memorial Day, asking young men if they would be interested in appearing on a new dating show. We did not approve that application."

Ms. Schermeyer warns that studios have to come to her with their locations in mind. It's not her job to scout locations. Enter Nancy Grigor, founder of Hamptons Locations. Ms. Grigor, a former model and actress, founded her company ten years ago and works with production companies to find the perfect spot for a movie, commercial or fashion shoot.

"There is a lot more to the process than just showing up and expecting people to welcome you with open arms," says Ms. Grigor. "Sometimes I start to work eight or nine months before any shooting starts to find a location, negotiate permits, make sure that insurance has been obtained and so on."

Ms. Grigor has over 500 locations in her files, but she is always looking for new places. "People get tired of the same old, same old, the house that's already been in a dozen movies. I try to give my clients something new," she says.

So if you aren't chosen to be in a movie, maybe your house will be. •

Town Crier Hugh King Conducts A Tour Of The Old Burying Ground

By Clara Jablonski

It's a gloomy Saturday morning. The town is beginning to arise, hoping that the devastatingly wet previous three days are gone with the moon, Yet the musky feeling still sits in the air and the gray skies nevertheless hang loomingly overhead, threatening to open. There's an eerie feeling in town, one that sends chills up your spine as though you are watching a thriller that keeps you on the edge of your seat, wondering what will happen next.

As far as I'm concerned, it is a perfect day to wander around the Burying Ground, the coffin-shaped cemetery in East Hampton, exploring the stories of East Hampton's residents who have been and gone.

Hugh King was to be my tour guide, and I met him in front of Mulford Farm on James Lane, almost directly across the street from the cemetery. To my surprise, as well as his, there was about ten other curious attendees who showed up, ready to embark on our journey through time, back to the days of the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries.

On our walk past Home Sweet Home, which is dedicated to John Howard Payne, Mr. King began to explain that the cemetery's location was crucial for two reasons. For one, way back in those early days, it was the center of town, a convenient locale for a cemetery. Secondly, the land on which the cemetery sits is rather uneven and would not have been good farming ground.

> We might actually be stepping on people's graves...because some of the stones were aligned after people were buried in order to make mowing the grass easier.

Our historical trip started with a brief look at the actual headstones, footstones and tablestones aligned in the grass. The grayish stones were speckled with a greenish-blue fungus called lichen that although didn't seem too aesthetically pleasing, was, in reality, a good sign of our clean air, as it is the only conditions under which lichen can survive.

We also discussed the changing decorative details on the gravestones. During the 1700's, the stones were kept simple and were written in all capitals. After 1800, you start to see weeping willows and urn carvings on the stones. Cherubs were said to either symbolize the soul being lifted to heaven with wings, or meant that the engraver was from the Newport area. And death heads with wings meant that the gravecutter may have been from the Boston area.

Mr. King then forewarned us that by passing through this cemetery, we might actually be stepping on people's graves. I was somewhat perturbed by this fact, but found it humorous when I found out that this was because some of the stones were aligned after people were buried in order to make mowing the grass easier.

We were told about an important grave-cutter who came from Connecticut and moved to Sag Harbor. This grave-cutter, Ethial Hill, was believed to be the first stone-cutter on Eastern Long Island and was known by the curlicue symbol that he engraved on the stones that he worked on, a handful of which we noticed on these grounds.

Next we noticed Phoebe Rysam's gravestone. It said that she was the late wife of Col. David Mulford and remarried Capt. William J. Rysam. But the unusual part was that her maiden name was never mentioned on the stone. In this way, a part of her identity was lost. And this was not uncommon for women who past away in the late 1700's and early 1800's.

While visiting the late Peggy Negro, who was described as a "servant to Abraham Gardiner" according to her headstone, Mr. King told us that her grave was unique because it was located in the central part of the cemetery. In those times, people from other cultures were usually buried on the outskirts of the cemetery. This leads us to believe that at one time, that was the edge of the cemetery.

Our next stop was to see an important German couple by the names of Gustave and Hannah Buek, who summered in East Hampton and collected antiques from Europe. They played a pivotal role in the history of Home Sweet Home because back in 1900, when it was falling down, that bought and renovated it. They set up their antiques and took people for walking tours to show them their treasures. Most importantly, because of the Bueks, the Village of East Hampton was able to buy Home Sweet Home in 1927.

The Morans were a family of artists also represented in the grassy Burying Ground. Thomas Moran was a great landscape painter who was part of the Tile Club, a group of artists that painted on tiles and later exchanged them. They came out to the Hamptons lusting after the infamous lighting out East. Moran is known for painting the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone, which was momentous because it finally showed people the beauty of those places, leading them to be set-aside as national parks.

Also laid to rest in the cemetery are Samuel "Fishhooks" Mulford and Abel Huntington, both important figures in the history of the East End, Samuel Mulford was a well-known captain in Sag Harbor back in the 18th century when Sag Harbor was a great whaling port. And Abel Huntington was a physician in East Hampton who introduced the smallpox inoculation to the area. Also, his son, another physician, wrote a paper on his findings on a shaking disease we today known as Huntington's Disease.

A most intriguing group of elaborate tombstones that we saw belonged to the Gardiner

Looking For MTV

Driving Up And Down The Beach... Where's The Party

By John Capone

The first (and probably last) time I thought MTV was cool was New Year's Eve, 1983. I sat alone in my pajamas in my grandmother's basement at midnight watching the new network's New Year's Eve party when the Police come onstage. Sting sported his post-apocalyptic-but-very-new-wave, torn jacket, and lunged into the opening bass lines after Andy Summer's blaring siren guitar sounded and kicked Stewart Copeland into the beat of Synchronicity II. As I drove over the Ponquogue Bridge on my way to the MTV Beach house this past rainy Saturday morning, when the whole East-End looked as though it should be on the banks of some dark Scottish Loch, my mind kept flashing back to the rising chords of that song. The gray sky bled to the gray shore. Many miles away something crawls from the slime. Seagulls hung in the heavy air over the bridge dotting the horizon for the length of the bridge. I watched as they bobbed and danced on currents of air, or floated above streetlights. Many miles away something crawls to the surface. When I arrived, the Beach House might well have been "a cottage on the shore with a shadow on the door." A very large cottage with flags on the roof and security out front.

Most ominously, there were hardly any cars parked in the MTV lot just down the road. As I said, I might have been nine the last time I really thought MTV was cool, but when I heard that we were going to the Beach House on Saturday morning I still thought it would be fun. Beyonce Knowles from Destiny's Child was scheduled as a special guest. Carson would be there, and DJ Clue and a slew of people who had their own unique spellings for their names: Hilarie and Quddus (they must cool, I thought, as I pondered changing the spelling of my name to Jhn or j-Hon or Nnny.) Limp Bizkit would be performing live. Okay, they aren't the Police, but still. I imagined dancing with Beyonce in her Burberry bikini to "Nookie," or at least dancing with Fred Durst to "Bootylicious."

I wanna be like Tabitha Soren with a picture tube bubble over me. I wanna have my own show on MTV. I wanna be Tabitha Soren, 'cause I'm not happy with me.

After talking to my editor the night before, I had a protracted argument with my wingman, Bonacker Bones, on the relative merits of Fred Durst and his oeuvre. Bonacker thinks Durst is cool. Says so. I'm aghast. "The band is lame and he's a giant dork," I say. "He's no cooler than that guy from Creed."

"That guy is a tool." Bonacker agrees, "But Durst, what, he went from Britney to Christina? Come on. He's going to mow them all."

"Whatever," I say, "Look, do you want to come?"

"I don't know. What time does it start?"

"11a.m. Sharp."

"Not very Rock and Roll."

"No. Are you coming?"

"Where is it?"

"East Quogue. 40 Dune Road."

"Ew, east of the canal. I don't think so."

So it was that I drove solo the next morning, passing no less than 15 cops between the turn off of Montauk Highway in Hampton Bay's at John Doran's and Dune Road in Quogue. 15 cops with nothing to do.

I was nearing the vortex, I knew it when I passed Summers, on Dune Road, and the sign out front said, "When it rains, we pour. Open until 4 a.m." Neptunes's sign let everyone know that they had tents up. They'd all be here soon. "I can smell them," Bonacker would have said, but he wasn't in the car. The gloaming had kept most everyone away from the beaches. Cops circled nearly empty roads.

I popped in my Jucifer CD and listened to "Hero Worship" waiting for the lines about Tabitha Soren. I listened to Amber Valentine singing as if she were lost in a daze. I wanna be like Tabitha Soren with a picture tube bubble over me. I wanna have my own show on MTV. I wanna be Tabitha Soren, 'cause I'm not happy with me. Henri Matisse once said that all art bears the imprint of its historical epoch, but it is great art in which this imprint is most deeply marked. Is MTV in all its vapid glory then great art? I was tapping into the mainline here. We would see.

I stopped in front of the MTV Beach House and rolled down the window to talk with the security guard. The total lack of activity had me spooked. "Is Limp Bizkit going to be here this morning?" I asked hesitantly.

He shook his head. "There's nothing going on today. Day of recovery after last night."

I got out of the car looking up at the beast of a beach house. I gestured at the flapping flags. "No shows today at all?"

"Nothing."

"Do you know when they'll be here? I must have the wrong day. Was it yesterday? Maybe it was Friday? Or Monday? " Did it happen at all?

He pulled out a schedule and we leaned on the hood of his truck. "Not scheduled. Yesterday Charlize Theron was here."

Panic. It crept up my spine like first rising vibes of an acid frenzy. Here I was, alone at the MTV Beach House, no photos of celebrities, no story for the paper. I didn't even know if Limp Bizkit ever really played at the Beach House. How would Tabitha Soren have handled this situation? •

Damon Dash Hip-Hop Impressario

By John Capone

Fulltime on the Hamptons scene is Damon Dash who runs a $450-million hip-hop empire comprised of Roc-a-Fella Records, Roc-A-Films, the Rocawear clothing line and Armadale Vodka. Rock-a-Fella is more than just a multi-media company; it offers a lifestyle with music, movies, clothes and liquor. The Roc-a-Fella crew has a talent for self promotion, and a Jay-Z show can sometime seem like an extended commercial for Roc-a-world. Dash said as much himself when he explained the rising popularity and success of hip-hop on PBS's News Hour with Jim Lehrer. "Hip-hop depicts a lifestyle," he said, "It's not just the music."

Dash started Roc-a-Fella Records with the rapper Jay-Z and Kareem "Biggs" Burke. Together, the three drove Rock-a-Fella to the heights it has achieved. Dash grew up in Harlem, went to P.S. 6 and attended the prestigious South Kent School in Connecticut. He didn't stay there, however, and came back to city after eleventh grade to attend the notoriously bad West Side High. He's described going back and forth between the two extremes as having "two lives" growing up.

In contrast, Jay-Z came up from the infamous Marcy Projects in Brooklyn, and took to dealing when his hip-hop career didn't seem to be going anywhere. Dash met Jay-Z when he was 21 and became Jay's manager. The two decided that instead of waiting for a record label to come around, they would do everything themselves, and Roc-a-Fella was born. The rest is a wave of success Dash and Jay have surfed like they were Montauk lifers.

When Dash first rented in the Hamptons with Jay-Z four years ago, DefJam co-president Lyor Cohen walked them through the treacherous world of late-summer Hamptons renting. Cohen hooked them up with realtor Bettie Wysor, at Dunemere Associates to advise them. They finally found a mansion known as Goose Creek, a $20 million, 30,000-square-foot, Italianate-stucco house on eight-and-a-half acres with pool, spa, tennis courts, 120-seat screening room and access to Georgica Pond, which they shared with Steven Spielberg, Sandra Bullock and Estee Lauder. Some, such as Cohen and Russell Simmons balked at the high amount, Dash and Jay-Z paid for the rental. Bob Felner, co-owner of Goose Creek, said that the $30,000 a week reportedly paid was inaccurate, but did concede that the rental was "a lot." He went on to tell New York Magazine that the rental was "Bigger than Puffy's." At any rate, by the end of the season Dash and the Rock-a-Fella crew had thrown some legendary parties in that private compound.

The good-natured Dash, recently told MTV that making music is a "sweet hustle" and that rappers should stop feuding...

The good-natured Dash, recently told MTV that making music is a "sweet hustle" and that rappers should stop feuding though he went on to say that as long as it stayed on vinyl the disses were okay, and even funny. If anything the feud he was referring to (between Nas and Jay-Z) has been good for the artists involved. The verbal sparing seems to have energized Nas, who had a hit this winter with "Made You Look," his strongest song in years and something of a return to form after a few lackluster albums. The battle has not been as kind to Jay-Z, who has mostly stayed above the fray, but has brought him some publicity. Jay-Z, one of the most consistent hip-hop artists over the past few years had his first misstep with the album, The Blueprint 2, and The Blueprint 2.1, something nearly unimaginable a year or two ago. Jay-Z might not be in the Hamptons very much this summer since he is out on tour, but he is coming to Long Island's Jones Beach on Monday, July 7th with the "Rock the Mic Tour" co-headlined by Jay and 50 Cent. The tour also features Snoop Dogg, Busta Rhymes, Missy Elliot, Sean Paul, Fabolous over the course of the 30 city tour. Jay-Z will be joined by Beanie Sigel, Memphis Bleek and Freeway.

Dash has been distancing himself from the music part of Roc-a-Fella recently to concentrate on movies and fashion. He says that he is surrounded by many talented people who can take over the executive duties of the label so that he can turn his attention to Roc-a-Fella's other arms and not be spread so thin. Dash has produced the films Streets is Watching, Backstage, State Property, and Paid in Full for Roc-A-Films, and most recently produced a hip-hop Spinal Tap-esque mockumentary, titled Death of a Dynasty which premiered at the Tribeca Film Festival in New York.

Dash has also recently taken over the West-Village space formerly occupied by Moomba. His partner in the new club, named the Breakfast Club, is Rock-a-Fella DJ Samantha Ronson (sister of Mark), and the new club will be run by Jeff Goldstein and Butch Ural of the Star Room. • yard, cars all over everyone's lawn, a Weber for a grill. What in the hell is elegant about a lawn party like that? It's not a lawn party — its a backyard BBQ for 200 with BYO Booze, about 100 hot dogs and Wonder Bread. How many people ever came back to your house for a second share house year? NONE.

"It's no wonder the Town of Southampton created tougher laws. They had you in mind. Your lack of understanding is obvious when you think that someone from the city or the neighbors are going to come to any party you arrange. They are heading to some multi-million dollar house with at least a pool and an elegant lawn party with servers and yes — real glasses, plates and silverware.

"You think you are the social doyenne of New York and the Hamptons? How many upscale events have you been asked to be on the committee for? None. You are delegated to 'Hot Babes Auctioned Off' nights and 'Fun with Wine.' You are like the Hooters of the Hamptons. I agree with Dan - you and your membership should boycott the Hamptons and head for the Jersey Shore."

The New York Times ran a lead article about all this on the front page of their ESCAPES section on the week of May 5. Among other things, they noted, was that attendance at the mixers in the city for shares in houses in the Hamptons was way, way down, "just five or ten people at a gathering where there used to be several hundred." Apparently, potential party hearty types are being discouraged by the Town's strong response to the share house problem.

Whoever runs an over-the-top share house in the Hamptons this summer can expect to face new fines of $1,000 a day for every day they remain in business. (There go the profits.) As for shareholders in these houses, they can expect to lose the $2,500 they have plunked down for their summer digs and find the place they have paid for closed. The Town is also cracking down on bars located in residential areas and expects to close them.

Meanwhile, there is an almost nostalgic quality to a TV show that is running on the cable channel WE these days. It is called "Single in the Hamptons," but, because WE dredges up old video that can be got cheap, what it is is a two-year-old British documentary about the party hearty share house people and those who make money off them. At one point, a twenty-something girl in a share house talks to the British filmmaker and says, almost wistfully, that she really has no way of knowing who is living in her house and who is not.

"There are 40 beds here," she says. "People just come in and out all night long. How do I know who is a renter here and who is not?"

"I'm sure you will work it out," the Englishwoman with the microphone says.

Well, she didn't. But the Southampton Town did. And we applaud them for their ongoing effort. •

review: the new proposed media law

By Dan Rattiner

Mark Twain, the humorist, once wrote a hilarious bit of satire about running a newspaper. It was a letter from a newly appointed editor-in-chief to his staff, exhorting them to uphold the highest ethical journalistic standards, take the high moral ground, accept no compromises from politicians, and, oh by the way, who is it around here who currently receives the free theater tickets because from now on they go to me.

Twain had, at the time he wrote this, assumed the editorial reins of a newspaper in California and he knew of what he spoke.

This essay came to mind the other day when I read an account of the hype that preceded the opening of the film Matrix Reloaded. It was in a review of that movie by Frank Rich to give credit where credit is due, and Rich noted that the film had brought in a staggering $135.8 million in its four day opening, shattering all records. And it was a major accomplishment for AOL Time Warner, the firm that owns the company that made this film, and also owns a wide variety of other newsweeklies and niche magazines.

Before the opening, Cornel West wrote an article for Time magazine which ran a still from Matrix Reloaded on the cover. Cornel West is a professor at Princeton, highly respected for his views, and he was able to state that Matrix Reloaded was a fine example of epic poetry and philosophy, and he managed to get into his article references to Schopenhauer and William James and Herman Hesse. Another Time Warner owned publication, Entertainment Weekly, ran an interview with Matrix producer Joel Silver, who boasted that before its premiere, Matrix Reloaded had an awareness level of 95 percent among the general American public. Well, why not? Matrix Reloaded was the cover story on Entertainment Weekly twice in one month before it opened.

family. Lion Gardiner was the original buyer of Gardiner's Island, formerly known as the "Isle of Wight," and he has a detailed house tombstone set out for him. Originally, the tombstone had cedar posts, but in 1886, they needed to be replaced. Interestingly enough, James Renway, who was the architect who designed St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City, was hired to update the grave. Also unusual about the grave is that it lies backwards in the cemetery. It faces St. Luke's Church and Home Sweet Home, unlike almost all the other graves.

According to Mr. King, another grave that is set facing the church may be the oldest grave in the entire cemetery. Dating back to 1696, it belongs to Thomas James, a former minister of the church. Mr. James had requested to face the church because it is said that he wanted to keep an eye on his congregation. Both Lion Gardiner and Thomas James lie close to the church grounds, meaning that the more important you were, the closer you were laid to the church.

And before I knew it our time was up. I had gotten so intrigued in the histories of these previous East Hampton residents that I didn't notice that a couple of hours had gone by and Mr. King said that we reached the end of the tour. And although my feet were soaked from the damp grass, I had had an insightful and productive morning and realized that what seemed like an incredibly dreary day had turned into a still-drizzling, but not-so-gloomy day. On the contrary, I felt somewhat uplifted by the very interesting sagas of the way this world was only two, three and four centuries before. While walking to my car, I couldn't help but think about how many pairs of feet had walked in my footsteps before me. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #250
New HBO Special: Tales From the Crack

Memorial Day has passed and the "season" has officially begun. Those of us who were raised by mothers from the '50s can now wear white. Black clothes are now forbidden until Labor Day. The greatest single failure of feminism will now appear: the inequity, the injustice and the inhumanity of bathing suits.

Men wear what is practical and comfortable because they don't give a rat's behind what you think about their bodies. They have this arrogant, "Hey, if you don't like it, look away," attitude. They wear shorts to the beach. Swim shorts with the built in jock, surfer shorts which are almost to the knee, and the big baggy shorts that look like Dads boxers with the fly sewn shut. But what all these shorts have in common is that they are baggy and reveal nothing of what a man might or might not have at his disposal. A few men — swimmers under 20, or totally buff guys — can wear Speedo's which is a kind of swimsuit that is spray painted onto a man's body. Nothing is left to the imagination, which can cause a woman to flinch in horror or say a silent prayer of gratitude.

When my grandmother went swimming as a young woman in the 1930's, she wore a knee length "swim dress," with a nice tank top. It was modest and comfortable. She didn't have sand sticking to the back of sunburned thighs when she sat on the beach. Women had recently gotten the vote and were suppressed in every area of society. Men wore what was practical and comfortable because they didn't give a rat's behind what you thought about their bodies.

When my mother went swimming as a young woman in the 1950's, she wore a fabric bathing suit that was a combination brassiere and girdle. It had a high back with firm molded cups in the front and a "modesty panel" across the crotch zone. It came down over the hip, even with the bottom of her torso and did not ride up anywhere it wasn't supposed to. Across the abdomen was an industrial strength girdle. It was "swimsuit in a drum." Women were still very oppressed in the '50's, their career options limited to nursing or teaching, but things were getting better. Men wore what was practical and comfortable because they didn't give a rat's behind what you thought about their bodies.

When I went swimming as a young woman in the 1970's, I wore a "two piece." It was basically a decorative bra and a matching hip hugger brief. No bikini shave required. I still had the option of a one piece, but it wasn't like Mom's. One pieces then were like one pieces today, 5 ounces of Lycra with something called a "shelf bra" which allows you to pour your boobs into a shapeless tit sling in the front of the suit. Men wore what was practical and comfortable because they didn't give a rat's behind what we thought about their bodies.

This was the height of Woman's Liberation and because I was liberated, I could expose as much of my body as was legal in order to prove my political and socioeconomic freedom. We burned our bras to demonstrate political freedom. Looking back, I'm not sure how burning my lingerie and exposing more of my flesh equated to personal freedom. I've scanned all the historical records of the founding fathers of this country and discovered that they were somehow able to repel the British without burning their underwear. I thought there might be a record somewhere of bonfires of underwear along the beaches scaring away the British, but nothing so far.

My daughter's swimsuit exposes more than she'd show if she wore a bra and panties to the beach. The top is spray painted on and the bottom is a strategically located triangle that attaches to a string in the back. The string disappears on a regular basis and must be retrieved from parts that only I, as her mother, have yet seen — I think. The suit is a female Speedo, nothing is left to the imagination, which can cause a man to flinch in horror or say a silent prayer of gratitude. My daughter has complete political, social and economic freedom. I guess the price of that freedom is being limited to wearing two ounces of Lycra on the beach. But men, ever slow to change, still wear what is practical and comfortable because they still don't give a rat's ass what you think about their bodies

Newspapers and magazines, many of which presume they have a bond of trust with their readers, would never have run such positive and well-positioned pieces on Matrix Reloaded if the "word had not come down from on high."

Well, it would not have comé down from on high if these newsmagazines and newspapers were totally independent. There is so much to be said for their having independent voices, unfettered from the interests of the suits upstairs. But on June 2, Monday, the government passes legislation tightening and gagging the media still further. Diversity in the marketplace is to be the loser.

Here in our marketplace, I have written, during the last twenty years, about thirty articles criticizing and condemning the Cablevision Corporation for things they have done. Having secured a monopoly for its services here on Long Island, it can dictate what you see on your TV screen, at what cost, and when. Only recently has Cablevision run into a serious competitor — and that is the satellite dish company DirecTV. I recently made a direct comparison of the offerings by each of these companies and made an interesting discovery. Cablevision provides a much more local service. You might get a little better reception with DirecTV, and there might be a few more national offerings, but with Cablevision you get WVVH in Southampton, LTV in East Hampton, News 12 Long Island, WLNY Riverhead, Channel 21 Plainview, even the local Weather Channel.

There is something cold and impersonal about DirecTV compared to Cablevision. I never in a million years thought I would be saying this, but Cablevision provides local programming that would not otherwise reach your TV screen. And Cablevision's reaction to this new law? One option would be to put itself up for sale. If you can't beat 'em, join 'em. We the viewers the losers.

Frank Rich, in his article, provides this direct quote from TV network mogul Barry Diller. Diller is the only such mogul to speak out against this new proposed series of laws. We agree. The law will diminish all independence of opinion. And that is bad for democracy.

"Our society will be harmed," Diller said. "Why are movies bad? Why is TV news in decline? Because they are now 20 rings of power removed from the top decision makers of these huge companies. Nobody cares about them. They are just commodities to deliver returns.

"These giant companies don't really compete with one another. They accommodate each other. Fox movies have to be sold to HBO. Warner Cable has to take Fox because Fox has sports teams. They talk only to each other. They don't have to do anything else for anyone else alive. It would be impossible today for an independent producer like Norman Lear to break in with a TV show as unexpected as 'All in the Family' or for a maverick to start a new network, as he did with Fox and Mr. Turner did with CNN. They'd have to cede their ideas to the big companies if want them to fly." •

If Wishes Were Horses: Southampton Town Applies for State Grant to Operate Beach Shuttle

By Catherine Gandel

The Southampton Town Board of Supervisors has applied to New York State for a $100,000 grant, part of which could be used to launch a shuttle service from the Bridgehampton School District parking lots to eastern beaches like Sagg Main and William Scott Cameron. Unlike town beaches west of the canal, these beaches have small parking lots that are quickly filled during the summer season.

The need for a beach shuttle is obvious to anyone who lives on a road leading to the beach or who just wants a day at the beach with the kids or with friends. One Hamptons resident notes that people going to Sagg Main beach often park all the way down to the Sagaponack General Store. "People are walking almost a mile and a-half to get to the beach," he says.

But beachgoers shouldn't take off their walking shoes just yet. Although Southampton Town Supervisor Patrick Heaney maintains that if the grant is approved within the next three weeks, shuttle service could begin by July 4th, he cautions that this is by no means a done deal.

If the grant does come through, the service would be administered by the Riverhead-based Peconic Community Council, a coalition of more than 200 health and human service agencies, through its Peconic Connections Employee Shuttle program. In June, 2002, Peconic Connections initiated an employee shuttle that runs between Gabreski Airport in Westhampton and the Macy's parking lot in Hampton Bays to certain Town destinations: the Southampton Town Hall, Southampton Hospital and Southampton College. a minute."

Another woman was hoping to get "discovered."

A man said he was doing it for the money, even if it were only $50 for a ten-hour day. "I like the idea that the film industry would pay me something."

Why would anybody want the film industry to pay them ANYTHING? Well, in my opinion, getting next to a movie star and having someone pay you to do it is an affirmation of existence.

I'll explain. Jack Nicholson, by himself, is Jack Nicholson, the nobody. Jack Nicholson, made up by experts, dressed by experts, photographed by experts, told how to move by experts, and given words to speak by a dozen experts who worked half a year to write them down exactly so, is an affirmation of his existence. Particularly if he adds his own expertise, which is excellent acting. In other words, he has been chosen by thousands of experts to be the best possible example of a human being for whatever it is they have in mind. They are aiming for the affirmation of tens of millions of theatergoers. They'll probably get it too.

So, it must be fun to be Jack Nicholson. Or Diane Keaton or Jim Carrey. And maybe you can get that sort of affirmation, too.

In a driving rainstorm, huddled in the lobby of Guild Hall, there they were. Those shooting for the stars.

"What does it mean age range?" a man asked, pointing to a line on the form.

"Just put down your age."

"But it asks for my date of birth further down. Maybe they want to know what age people say I am?"

"Just put down your age."

"And they want my dress size?"

"Skip that part."

Down in the theater along the wall, the photographer was taking pictures, directed by a man apparently in charge, of a tall, mysterious looking woman with short dark hair.

"How would you like to be a stand in for Diane Keaton?" the man asked.

"Pass," the woman said. "I've got a life."

"Well think about it."

"I just thought about it," she said.

Even star power has its limits •.

You'll feel better. You'll look better. And you'll live better.

"Memorial Day 2003"

This past Memorial Day weekend might not have been the best weather to grill a burger, but that didn't stop the Hamptons crowd from getting dressed up and kicking off this Summer's Social Season.

I started out at The Farm House in East Hampton. New owner, Marty Schnabel plans to create a restaurant-lounge type atmosphere on the weekends. Lizzie Grubman was hosting an intimate dinner party for her friends enjoying her first night out and back in the Hamptons. I sat down for dinner and an exclusive interview with Lizzie who told me, "the trend for this season are restaurants that turn into lounges." Lizzie was thrilled to be back in the Hamptons at her "home away from home." I'll have more on my one-on-one interview with Lizzie next week, where she shares what inspired her to take on her latest business venture that helped get her through an extremely difficult time.

The buzz this Holiday weekend was the old NV club in East Hampton taking on a new name Resort and new management. Hamptonites gladly waited in the rain to slip past the ropes and dance the night away to Thicke who performed live. The MTV crowd Quddus, Sway and La La loaded into the VIP room late night. It was the battle of the clubs this holiday weekend. Biggest VIP list wins.

Resort's rival club Star Room hosted a big welcome back bash, complete with Carson Daly, Carmen Kass, Tara Reid and Liz Jagger who were all dancing to the beats of celebrity DJ Jus-ske. Renovated and ready for action, Jet East had a slew of celebs at their Memorial Day weekend parties including, Carson Daly, Tara Reid, Victoria Silverstadt, and 2002 Playmate of the Year, Christina Santiago, Tinsley & Topper Mortimer, Chris Barish, Ogden Phipps, Elizabeth Jagger, Carmen Kass, and Jaime LeFrak.

Well the fun has just begun this summer season. If this holiday weekend is an example of the nightlife and parties this summer, I predict we have a lot to look forward to. Until then... Life is short! You only live once, party on!

Auto envy will abound as the Concourse D'Elegance arrives this weekend on Main Street in Bridgehampton. Classic cars of every shade and style will be prowling the streets and for those wondering what it takes to get behind the wheel, here's a little info. For those who aren't into the classics there's a few latter day lux mobiles on the list as well.

Concourse D'Elegance:

Biggest: The '39 Cadillac Fleetwood is the biggest of the bunch. This seven-passenger touring sedan was originally owned by Metro Goldwyn Meyer and was driven by actress Greer Garson.

Smallest: The '57 Abarth "Double Bubble" designed by Zagato is as small as they come. This definitely is not the car of choice for anyone who appreciates a little leg room.

Most Expensive: Far and away the most expensive car at the Concourse this weekend will be the '67 Shelby Cobra Daytona Coup which goes for a cool $2 to $3 million. Careful where you park it.

Rarest: Not surprisingly, the Shelby takes top honors here as well. There were only 6 of these cars built so they're about as rare as a parking spot on Saturday afternoon on Main Street in East Hampton.

Of Note: Also appearing will be a Hansgen Special, which is based on an Jaguar XK-120 and was designed by Walt Hansgen. The car participated in the last street race that took place in Bridgehampton in 1953. A serious car accident that year put an end to street racing.

Pleasures Of The Present:

Most expensive: There are a few chart toppers at the dealerships out here. The Jaguar 2003 XKR costs $87,000. Depending on the addition of a navigation package, wheel package, and/or suspension package (each package costing about $6,000), the price can be as high as $100,000. The Mercedes 2003 S600 with ultimate luxury makes it a classic favorite among Hamptonites. The beginning price is $130,000. Depending on dealership packages and accessories, the price can rise to $140,000.
Hamptons.

Fastest: Porsche 2003 911 Turbo Carrera GTs are popular Porsche models, but the 911 Turbo is even better. The base price for such a car is $105,000. Additional options and packages can boost the price to a whopping $150,000. But when you can go 190 mph, which is less than $1,000 per mph, the price sounds just right.

Biggest: The Chevy Suburban is just a bit

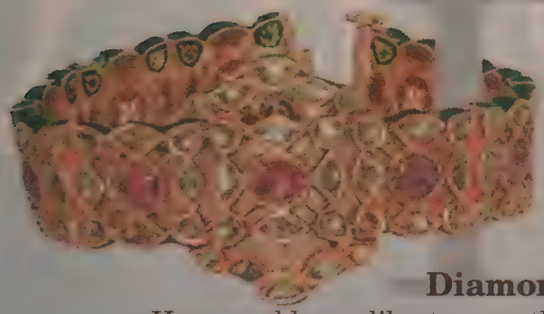
Art Deco Platinum Ring $22,650

Classic vintage is definitely the rage and this ring is a classic beauty from the early 1920s (art deco, circa 1922). It holds over four (4.2 to be exact), carats of diamonds that are surrounded by black onyx, set in a hand made platinum mounting. The two back to back pear shape diamonds gives this estate piece a unique appearance along with the exquisite workmanship of a bygone era.

Available exclusively at Gems of the Past, 60 Newtown Lane, East Hampton. 631-324-4367.



Diamond and Ruby Bracelet $2,800

How would you like to own this beautiful Indian estate bracelet? The stunning rose cut diamonds and rubies are set in 20K gold. There is very intricate meenakari enamel work that decorates the reverse side of bracelet. Custom jewelry design, components, loose bead strands, gemstone nuggets and briolettes are also part the line. If you are a collector of Indian estate jewelry, there is a wonderful collection to choose from.

the grant would be used to extend this shuttle service now available only at selected times in the morning and evening. Use of the shuttle has been slow to develop.

Heaney said that if town employees know that they could get home at any time during the workday, they might be more inclined to ride the shuttle.

Another winner if this proposal comes to fruition is the Bridgehampton School District. Shuttle riders will have to buy a parking permit and proceeds will go to the school. No word yet on how much the permit will cost or whether it will be daily or seasonal.

Calls to Supervisor Heaney and Peconic Connections were not returned. So at this writing, there are three big questions. Will the town get the grant? Will Peconic Connections agree to operate the service? Will the Bridgehampton School District allow their parking lots to be used? If the grant doesn't come through, Heaney said, "We'll do what we've always done: extend the no-parking regulations."

Congressman Bishop Targets Explosive Groundwater

By Brian Halweil

Responding to recent reports that a harmful explosive has contaminated the nation's groundwater, Congressman Tim Bishop (D-Southampton) joined colleagues last week in introduce the Preventing Perchlorate Pollution Act. This national legislation would accelerate the Environmental Protection Agency deadline for setting maximum allowable levels of the chemical in drinking water and also require public disclosure of all use, transportation, and discharge of the chemical.

Perchlorate, the explosive ingredient in rocket and missile fuel, has been associated with birth defects, cancers, and other serious health risks, especially for newborns, children and pregnant women. The EPA has identified contamination in at least 19 states, including New York. Public concern over perchlorate was heightened by a recent study showing harmful contamination in the nation's lettuce supply. "Percholorate has been a pretty serious problem in our area," Congressman Bishop said in a phone interview from Washington. EPA has detected perchlorate in both public and private wells in Suffolk County's groundwater.

Such contamination is particularly worrisome because of Long Island's exclusive dependence on its groundwater. The Long Island Aquifer was the first federally designated "sole source aquifer," meaning that Long Island residents have no other easy source for freshwater. "Clean water is the lifeblood of Long Island," noted Congressman Bishop, who made an issue of groundwater contamination during his campaign.

Dick Amper, executive director of Long Island Pine Barrens Society, an advocacy group focusing on groundwater and habit protection, said the legislation was important, but not sufficient. "Persistant chemicals, whether perchlorate or agrochemicals, that have been determined to be harmful to the aquifer should be banned outright," Amper said.

Cynics might also note that one of the primary local sources of perchlorate contamination is the Grucci Fireworks factory in Brookhaven, one of the largest international fireworks manufacturing firms in the world and owned by the same family as Felix Grucci, Bishop's Republican opponent in the 2002 election.

CHIP MONTE MARRIED AT GURNEY'S

Paul Monte, Chips younger brother and his best man presented the most unusual toast to the bride and groom: Candice Giordano and Angelo (Chip) Monte, Jr. Once upon a time there were two country roads, Candice Drive and Chipper Street - meandering through the countryside each one involved in their own lives. Through the years they intersected several times reaching dead ends on occasion; yet continuing on their journey until that very magic moment when their paths finally crossed again, and this time it was meant to be. Now Candice Drive and Chipper Street have joined together on this magical cul-de-sac, the circle of love, one road to eternity.

No Peking!

The Surprising Story Of The Rise And Fall Of The Long Island Duck Farm

By Susan Whitney Simm

When faced with writing a story over last week's dreary Memorial Day weekend for this week's issue, I couldn't come up with an interesting idea. After dismissing several thoughts, I was still struggling with this when a friend called.

"Hey," he said, "don't you just love this rainy, stormy weather?"

"No," I replied. "It's weather fit only for a duck. Or however that saying goes." But he gave me an idea. How about the story of the famous Long Island duck?

The history of the Long Island duck goes back further than most people realize. In the early 1870s, a Chinese variety of duck, the Pekin (often erroneously referred to as Peking) duck, was introduced to the United States. Several years later, commercial duck farms started to open along the creeks of Moriches Bay and the Great South Bay in Eastport. By 1900, twenty-nine duck farms were in operation in Eastport alone, earning that village the title "Capital of Long Island Duck farming." Other areas including, East Moriches, Speonk, Riverhead, Aquebogue, and even Water Mill, also had their fair share of duck farms.

In Eastport, there was a duck processing plant where the ducks were slaughtered, "picked" of feathers, cleaned and frozen for such large companies as Swanson Foods. The feathers were dried and saved for bedding; six ducks will produce one pound of feathers. During some years, when duck prices were low, feather sales kept some of the duck farmers in business. In addition, a feed mill was established in Eastport to make feed for the millions of ducks that were being raised at the time. Local farmers sold corn to the mill that was ground up, mixed with other grains and pelletized. This practice still continues today.

From about 1900 to 1940, Eastport was center of the duck universe. Atlantic Farm on the Speonk River, owned by A.J. Hallock, was considered, at the time, the largest duck farm in the world. It its peak, Hallock raised 250 thousand ducks in one year. Sadly, the Hurricane of '38 wiped the entire farm out.

In other East End areas, notable farmers, such as, A.B. Soyars, Dennis Homan, and Hollis Warner in Riverhead and Henry Corwin in Aquebogue started farming ducks.

In 1931, a duck farmer named Martin Maurer built a retail shop on Riverhead's West Main Street in which to sell his ducks. It is made of cement, is 20-feet tall and has Model-T taillights for eyes. Today, the "Big Duck" sits roadside in Flanders on property owned by Suffolk County. Referred to by some as the gateway to the Hamptons, it has been declared a National Historic Site and is used as a gift shop and information center. Each June, the Suffolk County Department of Parks, Recreation and Conservation holds a Big Duck Quack-Off. And right after Thanksgiving, there is the Annual Holiday Lighting of the Big Duck.

The Big Duck in Flanders

By the 1940s, some duck farmers had gone out of business and the 15 that were left in Eastport and the other East End towns were producing almost 7 million ducks annually. After World War II, duck farming was a growing business again, and by the late 1950s, almost every fresh water stream and creek in the area was home to a duck farm. Production on the farms had increased. Now it was Warner's farm that earned the title of "World's Largest" by raising about 500 thousand ducks in one year. But supply and demand caught up with these farmers. There was a duck glut and in 1959, they all lost money. They had to find a solution.

In 1960, forty-four farmers got together to form the Long Island Duck Farmers Cooperative. This co-op was established to promote and market the "Long Island Duck" on a national level. At the time, the combined inventory of roasting ducks in storage was over 5 million pounds. The co-op established a processing plant in Riverhead (to complement the one in Eastport) and combined, these plants shipped 40,000 – 50,000 ducks daily. Some ducks were shipped as far as, ironically enough, Hong Kong.

But by the late 1960s, trouble was brewing in duckdom. While the ducks were eating over 4,000 railcar-loads of feed annually, the waste from the ducks was going into the streams and creeks. The waterways around the duck farms were badly polluted and that pollution was leaching out into the bays. Bathing and fishing were being ruined. Public outcry to clean up the water became so loud that New York State established restrictions about where and how water flowed into and out of duck farms. These new rules required that farmers build pollution pits to catch the excrement and fermenting food before it went into the bays. Many small farmers couldn't meet these regulations and had to quit.

Today, there are only a couple of commercial duck farms remaining. Corwin's Crescent Duck Farm in Aquebogue still raises several hundred thousand ducks annually, and in Eastport where it all began, Chet Massey, whose family has operated a duck farm since 1944, is the only one left in that village. The industry left Long Island for places like Wisconsin, where labor is cheaper and regulations are, most likely, less stringent.

So that's the story of the Long Island Duck. Maybe this weekend will be warm and sunny and we can have our cookouts and make up for the washout of last weekend. How about commemorating the traditional Memorial Day, Friday the 30th, by throwing some Long Island Duck breast on the grill for old time's sake? Better than a hot dog and local, too. You can't beat that.

INTRODUCING THE VOLVO S60 R

You start with a notion, a belief that true performance doesn't exist solely on a test track. That speed is also a measure of agility and reflex, not just acceleration and velocity.

You think about driving in the real world. A world with stoplights, traffic jams and off-camber curves.

You think about go. 300 bhp turbo-charged twin intercooled 2.5L I-5 engine with a 6 speed close-ratio manual gearbox. 0-6 in 5.4 seconds.

Pull 295 lb.-ft. torque @ 1,950-5,250 rpm.

Hold. Electronically controlled all wheel drive, TRACS anti-spin and DSTC yaw control systems.

You think about adding more performance to Volvo.
And adding more Volvo to performance.
Then you build the Volvo S60 R.

Celebrating The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Local Dining Destinations

What's Cookin'

'Tis the time of year when we anxiously start scouting out our favorite farmstands for signs of summer. Horseradish, asparagus, and rhubarb herald the season as arugula, lettuces and over-wintering spinach follow on their heels.

While this process never fails to excite even dormant culinary instincts, perhaps those who get the most inspired are our local chefs. After a long winter hoping for freshness to arrive from around the globe, these masters of the range look ravenously forward to slicing and dicing the best the East End has to offer. And while the lushness of our mid-summer is indeed incomparable, it's always the sweet beginning that stirs us most.

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Coming this summer: outdoor Tiki bar. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [B]

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01) [G].

Fauna. A hip and elegant culinary gem. Co-owner and consulting chef Mark Mittelman's menu astutely incorporates Asian influences into superbly conceived New American dishes. Tuna sashimi shines as an appetizer, as does duck confit atop sautéed spinach with walnuts and dried cranberries. Try and find room for the butternut squash pot stickers. The all-star cast of entrees includes Southeast Asian steak salad, pan-roasted bourbon chicken and a Napoleon of roasted vegetables. Desserts rotate daily. Extensive wine list with sixteen local vineyards. Entrees $20-$26. Route 25, Aquebogue. 722-5813. (Trueman-Honey, 6/7/02). [A,F]

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02).

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartare and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakeable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03).

sine just steps away from a Long Island Sound beach. Chef/owner Wayne Wadington's menu undergoes constant revision, reflecting his selection of premium ingredients or his latest inspiration for a sauce. His creations fly off the menu almost as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance, put in for the Yukon Gold potato soup with an oyster beignet, the roulade of local crab with succulent micro greens or the Griggstown Farm quail in smoked bacon. Superb wine list. Exceptional desserts. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 11/1/02). [R,V]

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crabcakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02). [T]

Pepi's. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smokey. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, proscuitto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nick Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-19. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 6/8/01). [K,O,Q]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($21.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,S]

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.)

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuousity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano regiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [I]

New Kids On The Block

Size Matters: Two Young Vineyards Reflect The Growing Trend Toward Smaller, Quality-Oriented Operations

By Susan Whitney Simm

One day in 1996, Manhattan cardiologist Charles Sherwood Smithen called his wife Barbara in the city and asked her to meet him out on the North Fork at a farm on Oregon Road as soon as possible.

"I walked up to the door and an elderly man, holding a bunch of roses the size of dinner plates, said to me, 'your husband just bought my farm,'" Barbara recalled as we sat said in the lovely living room of the 1860 farmhouse. This is clearly a story she tells often and with delight.

It turned out that the gentleman was known as the famous "Candy Man" of Orient. But when the Manhattan couple got inside the house, Barbara realized that this was not going to be an easy project. The gentleman, who was in his 90's, had clearly spent a great deal more time out of doors tending his beautiful gardens than he did indoors keeping up the house.

"Charles said that he didn't want to put any money into the house at first, concentrating instead on getting the vineyard going," said Barbara, who played along for a little while. But it wasn't long before she began hesitating when he suggested going out east for the weekend. Eventually he got the message.

"OK, said Charles finally, let's do a few things to the house." In no time, it was gutted.

Today, the 38-acre vineyard is planted primarily with Chardonnay and Merlot, and the farmhouse, with its dark green marble counters and French country antiques, gleams with pride.

It all began back in the early 70s when Charles spent a few years doing medical research in England.

Barbara and Charles Smithen in their vineyard

"The English entertain at home and always serve five or six different wines. It was there that I really developed an interest in wine and also began collecting antique corkscrews and 18th century glasses," said Charles. He later shows me a toastmaster's glass that holds only a drop – so that the toastmaster won't get drunk from drinking to all the toasts – yet looks as if it is full.

Charles, who is on the staff of Cornell Medical School, and Barbara, a vintage jewelry dealer, began coming out to the North Fork about twenty years ago. They bought a house in Peconic and, on one of their trips out east from the city, noticed the Cornell Coopertive research facility on Sound Avenue. Charles, being associated with Cornell Medical, was intrigued. So he stopped in and discovered that they were in the process of studying viticulture. Inspired by this discovery and by the couple's love of wine, the Smithens sold the Peconic house in 1996 and decided to get involved in the local wine industry. Enter the farm on Oregon Road. The year was 1996.

The winemaker for Sherwood House is Gilles Martin and the wines are made at Premium Wine Group in Mattituck. The Smithens, who are very hands-on, are very involved in the winemaking process. The first wine they produced, a 1999 Chardonnay made from Burgundian clones planted back in 1996, was made in the style of a Puligny Montrachet, a Burgundian style favored by Charles over the oaky style of California. The Smithens entered the wine in the prestigious

Long Island's First Multi-Winery Tasting Room Opens In Peconic

In an unintentional nod to the past, a new tasting room has opened on Peconic Lane just steps from the old purple-shuttered offices of the late Michael Todd's popular Grapezine, the first North Fork publication to focus entirely on the local wine industry. But any connection to the past ends there, as this room, a multi-winery tasting facility, is the first of its kind in our wine region.

Managed by Robin and Karen Meredith of Broadfields Wine Cellars in Southold, The Tasting Room features, in addition to Broadfields wines, vintages from Sherwood House, Schneider Vineyards, and (coming soon) newcomer Comtesse Thérèse, all of which, for varying reasons, lack their own tasting room facilities. The brainstorm of Robin Meredith, The Tasting Room "fills an important niche for Long Island wineries by giving smaller, quality-oriented producers an opportunity to connect directly with the public at the same time allowing consumers to sample and purchase wines that might otherwise be difficult to find."

The facility, which had been open for business just five days when I visited on that rainy, miserable Memorial Day morning, was "coming together fairly naturally," said Robin. "And so far, the feedback on all the wines has been very favorable. We want this to be a unique source for high-quality wines. While it's great to be pleased with your own wines, it's even better to get positive feedback from an admiring public. That face-to-face experience is very rewarding and valuable."

How did Robin come up with the idea for the tasting room?

"We take lots of vacations to wine destinations and have seen lots of boutique operations where quality is key. Ever since Premium Wine Group was established in Mattituck, we've seen more and more small, quality-oriented producers popping up locally." Without the need to build a winery, planting and managing vineyards and working with a winemaker at PWG has also made it much more affordable to get into what is by nature an expensive proposition. Just ask any winery owner on the East End.

Currently available at The Tasting Room are a 2000 Chardonnay ($23) and 2000 Merlot ($27) from Sherwood House, Schneider Vineyards' "Small Lot Series" Chardonnay 2000 ($28), and "Small Lot Series" Syrah 2000 ($21), Broadfields' 2001 Cabernet Franc ($25) and 2001 Merlot ($24), and by the end of June, Comtesse Thérèse will be releasing four wines including a Rosé and three Merlots.

Will more vineyards be joining the effort?

"Perhaps. As long as it makes sense," said Robin. "This is the only place on Long Island where any of these wines are available for tasting. Here, you can taste wine that you can't taste anywhere else."

The Tasting Room is a stylish but understated renovation of an old double storefront that shares a block in Peconic, between the North Road and Route 25, with the tiny Peconic Post Office and two majestic Victorian B&Bs. By nature of its somewhat off-the-beaten-path location, it is a destination unto itself. But given its goal of friendly exclusivity, that's not necessarily a bad thing. –S.W.Simm

International Wine & Spirits Competition, held annually in London, where it won a bronze medal. It was also highly rated by The New York Times. Among their second releases are a 2000 Chardonnay and 2000 Merlot, the latter of which won a gold at the 2002 New York State Governer's Cup competition. Sherwood House, whose wines are made only from estate-grown grapes, was off to an auspicious start.

Robin Meredith at The Tasting Room

The terroir is high at here, Charles explained as we looked out over the orderly vineyards, and there are moderating winds from Long Island Sound, but right from the beginning the grapes have had desirable varietal characteristics, the results, he admits, of luck as well as a fair amount of expense in terms of fruit dropping (crop reduction designed to favor superior grapes by removing inferior ones).

Sherwood's vineyards are meticulously managed by Steve Mudd of Mudd Vineyard Management, and a meritage blend is planned for the future.

The Smithens are part of a new generation of vintners that are beginning second careers in the wine industry on the heels of successful first careers in professional though highly divergent fields. Robin and Karen Meredith, owners of Broadfields Wine Cellars in Southold, have a similar story.

The Merediths purchased property for a vineyard back in 1997 after doing extensive research. Robin, who is in marketing, and his wife Karen, an attorney, are self-confessed "wine geeks." After living in Colorado for about 13 years, they decided to come to New York and get into the wine business. But the idea came to them long before.

"We were at a barrel-tasting on the North Fork in 1992 when we looked at each other and said, 'you know, this might be a fun life,'" said Robin. So after looking out west in Oregon and down south in Texas, they decided that Long Island offered the best fine wine potential as well as having a good infrastructure. They then started working with winemaker Rich Olsen-Harbich back in 1993 and moved out here in 1994. It took them another three years to find just the right piece of land.

That land borders the North Road (Route 48) and can be seen from O'Mally's (formerly Ross') parking lot across the street.

"The vineyard is unusual in the sense that it is the highest point in the Village of Southold, about 60 feet above sea level. (The irony of calling 60 feet above sea level a high point is not lost on Robin, who spent years in mountainous Colorado). This elevation, along with a slight dome-shape, has protected the land from early and late season frost."

Having planted the vineyard in 1998 exclusively to Cab Franc and an emerging French clone of Merlot, the Meredith released their first wines, a 2001 Merlot and a 2001 Cabernet Franc, a few weeks ago. The wines were made at Premium Wine Group, also by Gilles Martin.

Robin and Karen are, like the Smithens, very hands-on. While Mudd does most of the "heavy lifting," the Meredith do a lot of the fine tuning themselves. This is extremely important to the new vintners, who firmly believe that "great wine is made in the vineyard. What you do in the vineyard comes through very clearly in the bottle," said Robin.

Broadfields usually does one big fruit drop, bringing yields down to about 3 tons per acre. In 2001 and 2002, that figure dropped even lower. Robin finds that this is one of the practices that makes all the difference between good and great wine.

What has been the Meredith's biggest challenge?

"Making great wine is harder than, I think, anyone could possibly imagine before they embark on an adventure like this," said Robin. "It is very challenging." How so? "It always comes back to the vineyard. There are almost endless opportunities to fine tune and improve. You know how people make New Year's resolutions? We have a kind of viticultural version. We ask ourselves, what are we going to do differently this year in the vineyard that's going to make things better?"

Another challenge Robin mentions is timing.

"2000 and 2001 were, as many people know, wonderful years in the vineyard, with the warm, dry falls. And in 2001, we were able to dodge a late frost, giving us good hang time and nice, dark fruit. But you get just one shot a year. For instance, I like to cook, and if I'm trying to perfect roasting a chicken, I might get 40 or 50 chances a year to roast one. But I only get one chance to make the wine. There's much less room for trial and error."

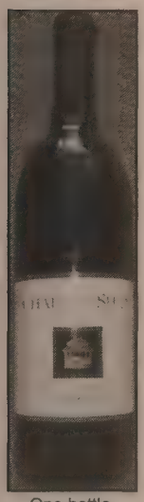
"Buck"ing The Trend

Many of you wine enthusiasts out there have doubtless heard of, or maybe even tried, the $2 California phenomenon sweeping the country: Charles Shaw wines, aka Two Buck Chuck. Actually, the Charles Shaw winery is defunct and has been recycled (how West Coast) to buy in bulk and bottle surplus wine from the surrounding region. While sold for $1.99 (two bucks, get it?) on the West Coast, on the East Coast it goes for the slightly less affordable $2.99 to $3.50.



One bottle, $2, no tears

This reminds me of the story of Walter Taylor, who made my favorite cheap, uh, affordable wine (these were college years) in the late 70s called Bully Hill. Taylor was forced to Magic Marker out his last name on the labels of Bully Hill (you could still make out the top of the T and tail of the Y) that sold for $1.99 in 1977, after Coca Cola bought his family's winery that had been founded back in 1878. The Magic Markering was the result of a lawsuit against Taylor by Coke, which won the right to use Walter's family name. Walter was down, but not out. Bully Hill continues today, with whimsical names like "Barnyard Red" and "Love My Goat." In fact, Walter became fond of saying, "They got my name and heritage, but they didn't get my goat!" Today, a bottle of Bully Hill sells for about $8.99 (down right high-end compared to Chuck), though it is hard to find on Long Island.

But getting back to Chuck. Is the success of this wine – millions of bottles have been sold since it was introduced in 2001 – a direct result of California's wine glut? Or is it another sign of the times, such as the celebration of frugality, the result of a gloomy economy and a reaction to the 80s and 90s "greed is good" philosophy? Whatever the reason, the wine is fine for the price, which is to say that generally it lacks depth, fruit and finish. I've heard it described as "potable," which about matches my impression, but that hardly inspires one to go running into the night (probably all the way to Trader Joe's in Jersey) in search of this low-priced wonder.

So what's the point here? Long Island winemakers have been criticized, more than once, for charging what is perceived as a premium for their wines. It is a basic tenet of business practice to base prices upon several factors, including the cost of production, operating expenses, and profit margin. We all know the cost of living and doing business on Long Island is extremely high. And the last time I checked, there was, thankfully for the vintners, no wine glut in our local marketplace. But while Long Island winemakers are making more and more impressive wines each year – they are competing in the global arena and bringing home medals – nearly all also make excellent second labels that are priced right for everyday consumption.

Following is a list of some personal favorites that I would not hesitate to bring to a dinner party. All are second label, non-vintage, or well-priced vintage bottles. And all bear the name of the producer proudly. If he were around to see them, no doubt Walter Taylor would approve.

The List: Second Label Doesn't Mean Second Rate

The List

Prices listed are those charged at the respective wineries. Starred items have been reviewed in Dan's wine column "By The Glass" or are just highly recommended.

Bedell Cellars' Main Road Red. Kip Bedell's grandfather's 1951 red Ford pick-up graces the label of this excellent blend of Merlot, Cabernet Franc and Cabernet Sauvignon. $11

Castello di Borghese 2001 Pinot Blanc. A delightfully crisp wine redolent of green apple and citrus. This refreshing summer sipper is a wonderful example of the vineyard's style. $10.50

Corey Creek 2001 Domaines CC Rosé. Yes, I admit I have a soft spot for almost any wine made by the extraordinary Eric Fry, and this one is no exception. Made from 100% estate-grown Pinot Noir, it has a gorgeous peach/coral color and wonderful fruit. $12

Galluccio Family Wineries 2000 Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon. A bright, fresh and fruity table wine that is perfect as an aperitif. $9

Laurel Lake 2001 Chardonnay. A steel-fermented, fruit-driven wine. Nice fruit aromas and a crisp finish. Take a bottle to a picnic. $9.99

Lenz 2001 Chardonnay White Label. Winemaker Eric Fry is a legend in Long Island wine country and this crisp, stainless-steel Chard is a good example of why. Can't beat it for $10.99

Lieb 2001 Bridge Lane Chardonnay. This second-label wine is in my opinion among the best the North Fork has to offer in crisp, easy to drink Chards. A perfect compliment to summer fare. $11

Macari Collina 48: Red Table Wine. A light bodied red made primarily from Merlot. Nice structure balanced between tannins and blackberry fruit. $9.99

Martha Clara Glacier's End Merlot. Nice aromas of ripe berries and plums. Surprisingly complex and full-bodied for the price. $9.99

Palmer 2001 White Riesling. Floral, fruity and crisp. I tried this wine with a cold mussel salad made with fresh ginger and it was delightful. $13.99

Paumanok 2001 Festival Chardonnay. I don't think Charles Massoud could make a mediocre wine if he tried, and this second label Chard is no exception. Full of fruit yet crisp, this wine will compliment anything summer sends its way. A bargain. $11.99

Peconic Bay Local Flavor Merlot. If you only have about ten bucks to spend on a Long Island red, this is the one to buy. Classic Merlot characteristics of red fruit and a velvety texture. It also sports a cool label by local photog Judy Ahrens. $10.99

Pellegrini 2000 East End Chardonnay. Nice fruit aromas and a soft oaky finish. Food-friendly and an excellent buy. $8.99

Pugliese 1998 Blanc de Noir. Pugliese has won many awards for their sparklers, and this wine, made in the traditional methode champenoise, is crisp and delicious. Extraordinary salmon color. Bring it to a special party. $17.99

Raphael 2000 La Fontana. At $20, this is the priciest wine on The List. This meritage blend is Raphael's second label and is very much in the style of Bordeaux. Although it tops the $ chart, La Fontana is so impressive that I felt it deserved to be included here. Luscious fruit, well balanced. Worth the $20

Schneider 1999 Potato Barn Red. Juicy blend of Cabernet Franc and Merlot. Deep ruby color, aromas of blackberry, chocolate, spice and cedar. Stylish label. $15

Ternhaven Cellars Carousel Merlot. "Last winery before France," is tiny Ternhaven's claim to fame. Carousel is a modestly priced table wine with many of the hallmarks of owner/winemaker Harold Watts' award-winning vintage reds. $10.99

Wolffer 2000 La Ferme Martin Chardonnay. I have been a big fan of this Chard ever since it first appeared in the early 90s. Crisp, complex, and whimsical with its clever Hamptonesque label of a polo player. Nice house gift. $13.50

Kitchens In Wineries: Why Not?

By John C. Ross

Wine is the most compatible beverage with food in the world. Almost every kind of food is enhanced by a glass of wine. Not many people would take issue with the above statements, so why shouldn't wineries be encouraged to have kitchens?

For the past 30 years, food has appeared at many winery events on the East End of Long Island. It has come in many forms and for many reasons: a simple table of bread and cheese; donated hors d'oeuvres for a fundraiser; a buffet for a tour group; a full dinner under the tents for a barrel tasting; an educational seminar on pairing wine with food; and, of course, many weddings.

In general, the food handling facilities at most wineries are very minimal, if they exist at all. Food for some of the big events is handled by professional caterers with refrigerated trucks and portable cooking equipment. But most of the food brought to wineries comes out of the back of a car or pickup truck and is placed on a table to be served. Much of this food is donated.

In my opinion, the public health would best be protected by wineries with legitimate kitchens, refrigeration space, dishwashers and adequate rest rooms.

As a longtime chef and occasional caterer on the East End, I believe that wineries with kitchens would pose no competitive threat to East End restaurants and caterers. Wineries will continue to use local chefs and restaurants to handle their food needs. Most chefs would greatly prefer working a party when proper facilities are available.

And what if a winery wants to go into the restaurant business? (God bless them!) Yes, they should have a health permit, a food manager's certificate and a tax I.D. number, and they should have to deal with all the competitive issues that a freestanding restaurant has to deal with.

What the local restaurateurs have to realize is that the wineries are the best thing that ever happened to them. The wineries have given our region a distinct identity and are a huge draw for tourists to the area. The restaurants can proudly serve wines from their own backyard and be involved with a multitude of events centering around the wineries.

The single most important thing is that the food people and the wine people must work together, protect the public health, and make a person's trip to the East End a thoroughly enjoyable experience. John C. Ross contributed this op-ed piece to Dan's Wine Guide. His views on the above subject do not necessarily reflect the views of Dan's Papers editors.

theatre review: gypsy by gordin & christiano

Created by a dream team of collaborators Gypsy is undoubtedly the greatest backstage musical ever to be mounted on Broadway and may even reign supreme amongst musical classics. Suggested by the memoirs of the late Gypsy Rose Lee, the legendary musical features a textured book by Arthur Laurents, a fabulous score by Jule Styne and scintillating lyrics by Stephen Sondheim. Under Sam Mendes's steady direction this current revival of the beloved musical is an uncompromising success, and Bernadette Peters is a revelation giving a triumphantly nuanced performance in the leading role.

Momma Rose is the glue that holds the pieces to this great musical in place and in playing her, Ms. Peters delivers the finest most multi-layered performance by a leading actress in a musical to grace the Broadway stage this season or for many a season. She lights up the Shubert Theatre with a galvanizing interpretation, which breaks the mold of all her predecessors, bringing a vulnerability, which cracks the surface of Rose's steely facade. You believe the pain of abandonment propels this manic ambition driven woman. Her mother deserted her along with several husbands. There is a desperate need to prove them wrong and to live vicariously through her daughters. In her hands Rose in no Mack truck, but instead a vital mix of contradictions. She is a sexy woman just past her prime, possessing an unrelenting will to fight any obstacle in her path. Whenever, the frenzied activity stops you get glimpses of the haunted soul beneath. We feel for this Rose, not just admire her brassy determination. The sexuality she brings allows us to understand her relationship with Herbie making it clear why he stays, and how she manipulates him. Her Rose is not beneath using her sexuality to get what she wants. Sex is part of her armor. We see this Rose is working and working hard to banish the demons. Whenever Ms. Peters opens her mouth to sing, her Rose has something to say, something she needs to say. We feel her urgency. Her fierce delivery of Some People near the end of the first act it is infused with all these emotional dimensions, and we know everything had better come up roses or else. She is not just belting to the last row in the balcony; she is struggling to survive.

Naysayers be banished! The lady, who has been called a Broadway baby, is well on her way to becoming a Broadway legend, and her transformation here is utterly brilliant. Her finely etched characterization surpasses everything she has done to date. Nothing she has ever done before, with the exception of Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Song & Dance," has prepared us for her performance as Rose and then everything she has done has prepared her. Here is a star at the height of her powers using everything she knows to breathe life into a character, which many felt, was beyond her proving precisely the opposite that it is within her.

All of the performers are terrific. John Dossett is particularly good as Rose's manager/lover Herbie, bringing gentleness to counterpoint he anger in the role and allowing for nice chemistry with Rose. As a result their break-up near the end is most moving. Tammy Blanchard is excellent as Lousie and makes a nice transition from gawky juvenile to burlesque stripper-possessing ambitions of her own.

Sam Mendes deserves much credit and has done an outstanding job not only with the actors, but also the production. He has focused on the theater as a way of life and has put backstage to the foreground. He is done so with a relatively bare set, which allows grittiness to infiltrate the production. He keeps a spotlight on Rose whenever her girls are performing, making effective comments on Rose's intensity and the pleasure she derives vicariously from them.

Choreographer Jerry Mitchell has kept most of Jerome Robbins' glitzy original choreography while adding some of his own. The staging of the "Gotta Have a Gimmick" number with the strippers has a seediness which seems right on and the three actresses, Heather Lee, Julie Halston, and Kate Buddeke, playing them are outstanding.

The staging of the final number is just too fabulous, supported by Anthony Ward's tumultuous scenic concept and oh the lighting darlings... it's just so marvelous.

Bring out the champagne boys Sam Mendes has succeeded big time, and his Gypsy is a bona fide winner.

Gypsy is playing at the Shubert Theatre (225 West 44th Street NYC). Performances are Monday through Saturday at 8 p.m., with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2 p.m. For tickets call 212-239-6200.

Writers Wanted: Hamptons Shorts

For the writers in the audience, Hamptons Shorts, the literary magazine of the East End, which publishes short fiction by local writers is accepting submissions. Young writers between the ages of 15 to 19 are asked to submit stories of 3,000 to 6,000 words, double spaced including their name, phone number, a short bio and email on the cover sheet. The deadline for the contest, which offers prizes of $1,000, $600 and $400, for first, second and third place, respectively, is June 20, 2003. The magazine is also seeking submissions from older writers and manuscripts can be sent to the same address by the same means. Submissions should be sent as email attachments saved in a Text Only format to hamptonshorts@hamptons.com. Or send a CD-RW 80 or CD-RW disk to Hamptons Shorts, P.O. Box 1229, Water Mill, NY. 11976. If none of the above are possible, send hard copy to the same address.

Good luck.

Rock 'n Roll Is Here To Stay... (In Westhampton Beach)

If you're a Rock 'n Roll groupie, better get your shoes shined, and your hair pomped, because the hot rockin' summer event is back! The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Theatre will be hosting the fifth annual Rock 'n Roll Review on Thursday evening, July 31, at 8 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at $100, and going fast. This exclusive event has drawn sold out audiences since it's inception five years ago...

Promoter Rocco Oliverio, has done it once again. He has brought together a triology of groups for this very important event that will benefit the Special Olympics.

Leading the program is Frankie Lymon's "Legendary" Teenagers, originators of "Why Do Fools Fall In Love" and members of the Rock 'n Roll Hall of Fame and the Vocal Group Hall of Fame. The Teenagers still appear throughout the world, having recently performed to standing ovations for thousands of adoring fans in a return visit to the United Kingdom.

The Tokens, featuring original lead singer, Jay Siegel, made their debut more than thirty years after their first big hit, "Tonight I Fell In Love", re-emerged on the Billboard Hot 100 singles chart in August of 1994, following the release of their chart-topping single, "The Lion Sleeps Tonight." With that re-entry comes the distinction of having the second-longest chart span in the rock era! The release of the Disney motion picture, The Lion King prompted RCA to re-release "The Lion Sleeps Tonight" and a CD featuring a unique compilation of twenty of the The Tokens' earlier tunes. The Tokens also sang backup vocals for such diverse artists as Del Shannon, Melissa Manchester, The Blues Project, Keith, Mac Davis and Bob Dylan.

The Capris have the distinction of being one of the last remaining original groups that are still thrilling the crowds with their excellent showmanship and inimitable harmonies. Their 1961 number one hit, "There's A Moon Out Tonight" is considered one of the classic Doo Wop songs of all time, followed by the infectious rythms of the "Morse Code Of Love", 1982.

Nick Santa Maria (a.k.a. Santo), is the original lead singer and principle writer for the group. When he sings a song, be it a ballad or an up-tempo tune, you know that Nick is singing from his heart. Although thirty-five years have passed since the group was first formed, many of his fans liken his voice to that of a fine wine, that gets better with age...

The Capris

Frank Reina, the original second tenor and other lead singer, hails from the City Line section of Brooklyn. I went to J.H.S. 214 with Frankie Reina, and remember him and the group well. Frankie as we knew him, was dubbed "Shorty", is a consummate performer who takes al lot of good natured ribbing from the group because of his height, but what he lacks in size, he more than makes up for when he applies his rich harmony and unrelenting energy when participating with a fun loving audience.

Tom Ferrara, is a veteran singer whose professionalism extends beyond thirty years. Prior to joining The Capris in 1975, he was a featured member of the Del Satins, who backed Dion when he broke away from the Belmonts.

theatre review: oklahoma by denise bornschein

Once again the Gateway Theatre has revived a tired Broadway classic "Oklahoma" by injecting loads of talent, creative set designs, colorful costumes and fabulously gifted singers and actors. Thus surpassing my expectations and changing my opinion of the musical. I had always loved the score, the first collaboration between the legendary Rogers and Hammerstein featuring "Oh! What a Beautiful Mornin'," "People Will Say We're In Love," and "Surrey With the Fringe On Top," but I felt that the plot was a bit hokey. Today, with all the complicated things going on in our world, it was a welcomed and refreshing treat to sit in the Bellport Theatre while being entertained by some of the most talented performers and a plot that deals with falling in love in a tight-knit community (pretty nice, huh?).

The musical Oklahoma directed by Tom Kosis and produced by Paul Allan opens the 53rd season at Bellport's Gateway Playhouse, Long Island's only regional theatre. Mr. Kosis is no stranger to the New York theatre scene his Broadway resume includes Associate Director/Choreographer for "Side Show," "The Scarlet Pimpernel," "Flower Drum Song" and five years with Radio City Christmas spectacular, as well as choreographer for "Late Night with David Letterman" and the Walt Disney Company.

The show that won a Pulitzer Prize in 1944 for Drama while running for 15 years and was again revived in 1980 and 2002 on Broadway was originally considered to be an American folk opera. It reflects a simple time when a man would sell all his belongings at a county fair so that he would win the basket lunch prepared by the woman he loved. A woman's honor and a man's integrity meant everything. And this production conveys the innocence of the times with a sense of real camaraderie. The two leading roles, Curly (Matt Nall) and Laurey (Erica Piccininni) have a "Hollywood type of chemistry" reminiscence of old film stars such as Cary Grant and Deborah Norvell and the "Cat and Mouse games" played by Katherine Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart. They both have outstanding voices as well as being totally adorable. My other favorite was Ado Annie Carnes (Melissa Bohon), the tiny spitfire who charms the audience with her number "I Cain't Say No!" and supplies the play with an abundance of comic relief. Her scenes with the Persian peddler Ali Hakim (Stuart Capps) and Will Parker (Shane Braddock) are hilarious. I was even impressed by the sleazy portrayal of antagonist Jud Fry (William Thomas Evans) who adds to the theme of "Good vs. Evil."

The dance numbers are extremely energetic and fun as well as the musical direction. Thank God for the live orchestra, they are as necessary to the production as the actors prove to be. And the orig-

Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

The few weeks between Memorial Day and July 1 on the East End are really what we call Spring. The weather warms to comfortable outdoor temperatures, spring blossoms begin to peak, and produce is planted. It is also a time to quietly enjoy our wonderful cultural offerings without the crowds of July and August.

There are some good theatrical performances this week. This is the final weekend of Ben Gazzara's debut at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre in the world premiere run of Nobody Don't Like Yogi. The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center presents the Hampton Theatre Company's production of three one-act comedies, Death Defying Acts, by Woody Allen, Elaine May and David Mamet.

This is the last weekend to view the critically-acclaimed exhibit "An American Legacy: Art from The Studio Museum in Harlem" at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum. Sag Harbor's Whaling Museum opens its summer exhibition "The Way We Were: Sag Harbor in Postcards." Writer/photographer John Gruen talks about his new book at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor on Saturday. Palestinian diplomat Ambassador M. Nasser Al-Kidwa will speak about the Israeli-Palestinian crisis on Sunday in Water Mill.

Local musical highlights include Derek Trucks Band at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse and Chris Barrett in the Maidstone Arms' piano lounge on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Ducks Unlimited has an outdoor sportspersons' festival at Hubbard County Park (in Flanders, between Hampton Bays and Riverhead) all day Sunday.

There are no big benefits this weekend, but next weekend ushers in a blockbuster roster. One is a Latin dance party and preview of Betsey Johnson's fall fashions at Star Room, a benefit for The Retreat, our local shelter for domestic abuse victims. Discounted admissions are available in advance ($100) by calling the Retreat's office on Goodfriend Drive, East Hampton, by today (May 30).

THEATER

Thomas Lysaght's new one-man play Nobody Don't Like Yogi, about baseball great Yogi Berra's emotional return to Yankee Stadium in 1999 after a 14-year absence, has its final performances this weekend at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre. Starring Ben Gazzara, showtimes are Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m., Saturday at 4 p.m. and Sunday at 7 p.m. For tickets ($38-60), call the box office at 631-725-9500 on log on to the website www.baystreet.org.

Our leading community theater troupe, Hampton Theatre Company, is co-producing three one-act plays by Woody Allen, Elaine May and David Mamet titled Death Defying Acts with the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. The show just opened at WHBPAC and performances are Thursday to Sunday, May 29 through June 15. For tickets, call WHBPAC at 631-288-1500 or online at www.whbpac.org.

MUSIC AND COMEDY

Pianist Joan Rowland will play selections from Chopin and Mozart on Sunday, 3 p.m., at the Rogers Memorial Library in Southampton. There is no admission charge, but reservations are requested; call 631-283-0774 ext. 523.

Mellow music at local clubs and restaurants: Montauk–at Gurney's Inn and Montauk Yacht Club; at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse–Derek Trucks Band (Fri.); East Hampton—fine pianists playing pop standards in the Maidstone Arms' lounge; Wainscott—comedy Fri. at Star Room, music at Rubi Red and Saracen; Sag Harbor—Hunky Page at American Hotel, musicians at Giordano's, accoustic guitar Sun. at Paradise; Bridgehampton–soft jazz and pop standards at Kipling's, Stefanie Cardinali & company at World Pie (Sun. brunch) and Pierre's (Sun. eve); Water Mill–good musicians at Gin Lane; Southampton–live music at 75 Main; Westhampton–good music at Belle's Cafe; Quogue–live music at New Moon Cafe.

SPEAKERS

Thelma Golden, the Harlem Studio Museum's deputy director, will lead a lively discussion on race, representation and identity in Black art today at Southampton's Parrish Museum on Saturday, May 31, at 4 p.m. There is no admission charge for Museum members and $7 for guest attendees.

Ambassador N. Nasser Al-Kidwa, permanent observer for Palestine to the United Nations, will speak about the crisis in the Occupied Territories and the prospects for peace with Israel on Sunday, June 1, 2 p.m. at the Water Mill Community Center. There is no admission charge but space is limited.

At local bookshops this weekend, Thane Rosenbaum will read at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. from his new novel. John Gruen will be at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Sat., 6 p.m., with his new photo book Young In The Hamptons.

SPECIAL EVENTS

The Long Island chapter of Ducks Unlimited, a national nonprofit conservation organization, will hold an Outdoor Conservation Festival in Flanders (Rte. 24, between Hampton Bays and Riverhead) at Hubbard County Park from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. on Sunday, June 1. There will be fishing and wildlife displays, decoy carving and sporting- dog (retrievers) handling demonstrations plus children's activities and a sportsmen's memorabilia exhibition. theater review: nobody don't like yogi by jan silver

Thomas Lysaght's one-man play Nobody Don't Like Yogi is having its world premiere run at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre. Accomplished actor Ben Gazzara undertakes the challenge of bringing baseball great Lawrence "Yogi" Berra to theatrical life. At the final preview performance, Gazzara captured the comedic and dramatic spirit of Yogi in a few scenes, but most of the play, as now written and directed, is just a quiet recitation of major events in Yogi's public and private life.

Nobody Don't Like Yogi does leap to life in one pivotal scene when Yogi, during his 1984-85 stint as New York Yankees manager, stands up to the team's controversial majority owner George Steinbrenner. Steinbrenner fires Yogi, but, as Yogi soon reflects,"Baseball is cruel. I didn't have to be. I said what I had to say...". (This leads to Yogi's self-imposed 14-year exile from his beloved Stadium.)

There are perhaps two other scenes during the 90 minutes of this intermission-free play that hint at a theatrically-realized Yogi. Otherwise, the dialogue is mostly expository, filled with wistful reminiscences and humorous Yogi-isms such as, "The more you win, the less you get fired."

It is difficult to turn a real person into a dramatic character, especially one still so active, vital and in the public eye. The play reveals Yogi, as a second generation Italian-American, to be a fierce supporter of family, a very loyal and ethical man, publicly shy and privately sensitive. He left school after the eighth grade to help support the family, so is he always aware of his educational shortcomings, but he develops a worldly wisdom from his life experiences.

He grew up in the "Dago Hill" section of St. Louis, one of several children in a loving family. He is a naturally talented athlete but knows he is homely. ("I was called 'Shorty' and 'Chimp'.") He served in the Navy during World War II and, when discharged in September, 1946, goes right to work as a Yankee.

Joe DiMaggio is the Yankees' captain then, and Berra is in awe of him, but Berra can hold his own. He hits a home run in his first game as a rookie. "I may have looked funny. I may have talked funny. But I didn't hit funny."

The play touches on Yogi's past, present and future including his love and respect for his mentors, legendary Yankees manager Casey Stengel and famous retired catcher Bill Dickey. Yogi talks about his parents, his wife Carmen, his three sons, and the respect he has for the traditions of Yankee Stadium teams. "We were a family. We were all married and there were no divorces then."

This production's costume and set design are blessed by the genius of Tony Walton who has created a minimalist set that invokes a real sense of Berra's love and respect for Yankee Stadium. Ken Billington creatively lights Walton's elements and Tony Melfa enhances the emotional tone through his sound design, especially during Yogi's speech on his first return for Old Timers' Day in 1999. Director Paul Linke, a specialist in one-person plays, tries to vary the pace at which the important circumstances of Yogi's life are presented, but there are redundancies and the play needs tightening.

One longs for stronger comedic and dramatic moments to make this a riveting play rather than a nostalgic monologue. Ben Gazzara is in the process of developing Yogi into a believable and touching theatrical character.

The show plays at Bay Street Theatre through June 1 and then moves to a summer theater before opening on Broadway in mid-September. It could be a formidable piece of theater by the time it reaches the Big Apple.

Performances of Nobody Don't Like Yogi are Tuesday through Sunday evenings plus a 4 p.m. Saturday performance through June 1. For tickets ($38-60), call the Bay Street Theatre box office at 631-725-9500 or visit their website at www.baystreet.org.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hampstons

Bruce Almighty
The In-laws

Film critics are a strange and spooky lot. It helps to know where they're from, if you want to know where they're coming from. (To use the parlance of the bygone 60's.)

As an example, some critics in far-flung locations like Cleveland, Kalamazoo or Rochester might be continuing to wear polyester flair-bottomed slacks in cream and purple plaid. These critics might be quoted in ads for Jim Carrey's new release Bruce Almighty with raves like: "Best Funniest Movie of this or any Century" \\Merv Year Lee, Timeless Magazine." "Pistol-Packed with Laffs" \\Lowe Caliber, NRA Monthly, "Non-Stop Hilarity and Plot as thick as Heinz Ketchup" \\Semi Wheeler, Truck Stop Radio News. There are usually 6 or 8 of these per full-page ad. This kind of advertisement is being used to promote Michael Douglas' follow-up tour of duty in hilarity-with-a-heart, comic movie The In-Laws. The In-Laws is a remake of the 1979 silly putty, same title film starring Peter Falk and Alan Arkin. At its' core, Bruce Almighty is also a remake, a replay of Carrey's 1997 Liar Liar, in which a first class loser is empowered by a mischief-making heavenly genie. Since mischievous power suits Mr. Carrey right down to his worn down Adidas, he's done this role over and over so, by now, he has it down pat. His doofus persona given unbridled force, creates anarchy, pay-back destructive reprisals that make most of us envious. Wouldn't we like to get even with the person in the car that gave us the finger? This naughtily rude arrogance is Carrey's hold on the audience however, it repels me because, lurking in that square loser is a joking pyscho who can hurt a whole lot. Bruce Almighty gives Carrey the ultimate threshold of pain infliction, he is God for a while. Oh, my God! George Burns never had it so good.

Reflecting the 12-year-old boy in all of us (yes, you smug women, as well), Carrey's TV news reporter, given the omnipotent power of God, lifts girls skirts and potty trains his pet dog as well as declaring war on civilization (as we know it) and unleashing a blitz onslaught of whim and whimsy. This is the rage of the nobody, the guy who's been passed over. His TV guy's anger peaks when he learns he's not been given an anchor slot. Obscenities fill the airwaves in the kind of on-camera explosion, tailor made for Carrey's manic mania. In it, he also blames God. God, in response, wants to teach him a lesson. As God, Morgan Freeman adds a classy dash of sincerity. In the end, sincerity is dashed upon Niagara Falls' rocks, the movie's location.

The potent energy of Carrey makes Michael Douglas' performance in The In-Laws as shrunken as a plunge into Arctic waters. One cannot even say that he phoned it in. It is so impersonal, it's more like a postcard already imprinted with "Wish you were here," mailed after his return home. With Albert Brooks as a buddy/foil podiatrist to Douglas' CIA agent, related by marriage, the humor is so miniscule, even given a thong to wear, it covers, too well, the short-comings of a totally emasculated comedy.

It's interesting to note that NBC's Gene Shalit gave Bruce, a rave review. It get's the whole page. Well, he's quite a local cut-up, too. I love him but he is made up and costumed by the Jim Hensen puppet troupe. UPROARIOUS, is the gist of the quote. Trust him.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-wining European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

inal costumes designed by Jose M. Rivera are very well suited to each actor. Lots of ribbons and lace for the ladies and chaps and cowboy attire for the men. The set designer Michael Boyer had some very unique ideas, especially the great idea of using cornstalks across the stage instead of the curtain.

So bring the whole family down to the Gateway Playhouse in Bellport for some good clean fun. Oklahoma is running from May 21-June 14. It has added school matinees on May 21, 23 and 28 at 11:00.

To accommodate school groups who had to cancel trips to Manhattan after districts imposed war-related travel restrictions. Evening performances are Tuesday –Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 7 p.m. Call 1-888-4tixnow or visit the web at www.gatewayplayhouse.com.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

It seems only natural that a gallery's first Spring show for the season should feature flowers. And that, in fact, has been the routine with several local venues. For the newcomer Tulla Booth Gallery, there's another reason why flowers are the focus. Ms. Booth herself is known for photographs of luscious and often surreal blossoms.

There's hardly a surreal flower in sight, however, at the current exhibit. But there's lots of stylization anyway, namely Expressionism, some Impressionism and even Realism. Yet style is not the show's raison d'etre. Shapes and techniques are. "Art for art art's sake" predominates, except in the possible case of Ann Chwatsky's work.

Shapes and light are the draw in photographs by Tom Baril, whose flowers reflect obvious sexual symbols. Not a new idea exactly but one that works effectively here. We can't help but wonder if his position with Robert Mapplethorpe as a printer inspired him, despite the fact that that's a glib assumption to consider.

Ms. Booth's white single blossoms are the most eye -catching of the bunch and deservedly so. The petals are metaphors for human skin, veins and all, and we marvel at their realistic, almost surreal quality.

Ion Zupcu's silver prints juxtapose flowers and forms (various vassels) bordering on Expressionism, their defused lighting effects evoking an arresting mythic ambience.

John Dugdale's photographs using blue emulsion are narrative in nature, the only pieces to suggest a story. They also represent contradiction: a small, close- cropped still life vs. a longer view of a man hidden among the flowers in a field, this image providing us with a plot worth pursuing.

Finally, Ms. Chwatsky's works are equally intriguing, because we aren't familiar with these images, primarily knowing the photographer's often feminist, figurative pieces. These pictures are still somewhat political in nature, nonetheless: The flowers and seed pods are not "perfect"; the seed pod is obviously wilted, and the lily's petals have fallen off. What Ms. Chwatsky may be suggesting is the negative aspects of nature, a fact we know all too well. Or, perhaps, she's saying that nature is the ultimate cycle of life and death. Who can argue with that?

"Botanica" will be on view at Sag Harbor's Tulla Booth Gallery until mid-June.

Honoring the Artist: Roy Lichtenstein

Dorothy Lichtenstein at home

This week's cover artist, Roy Lichtenstein, demonstrates once again that life is unpredictable at the very least. Just when you think you have something figured out, life experiences prove you wrong.

Mr. Lichtenstein's cover piece, "Red Barn," is a perfect example. It simply doesn't fit the stereotype of his famous "Pop Art" works, although it was created in 1969. Yes, the famous "dots" and bright colors are there, but not the hard edge, cartoon-like characters. There's something familiar and comfortable about the artist's barn, something that's not positioned in any particular time or place.

Familiar and comfortable may also describe Mr. Lichtenstein's home in Southampton where his widow, Dorothy, resides. It also doesn't fit any stereotypical notion one may harbor. Subtle, earth colors permeate the rooms, rather than bright ones, the spaces brimming over with objects and furniture from other cultures. We can't help but notice the contradictions, too: a classical piano in the living room corner; natural flowers in the kitchen.

Dorothy Lichtenstein's demeanor is intimate and heartfelt as well, like her husband's "Red Barn" and residence. Such qualities pervade a myriad of confluent ideas and events, fitting not only Dorothy's commitment to Planned Parenthood, but also to the organization's forthcoming benefit at the Lichtenstein's home.

Dorothy's interests cover a variety of areas, however, including her liberal stance on the current conservative climate and the graduate students who are conducting research and/or writing dissertations about her former husband's art.

Additionally, Dorothy is quite involved in the Roy Lichtenstein Foundation and the forthcoming exhibits of Mr. Lichtenstein's work; she talks with special enthusiasm about future shows in Vienna, London and Madrid.

And, naturally, Dorothy talks with knowledge and energy about the art Mr. Lichtenstein created before he died in 1997, notably the Asian-inspired "Landscape with Grass" and "Landscape with Boat." The works are nothing like we'd expect from a Pop artist, evoking a sense of serenity and spirituality.

When we look at this art, we experience life's unpredictability. Once again.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

A private auction to benefit Planned Parenthood will be held on June 7 at the home of Dorothy Lichtenstein. "Red Barn" will be among those works to be auctioned. Call 631 - 361 - 7526 (Ext. 229) for more information.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

While Memorial Day Weekend may have marked the official beginning of summer (although we can't forget there wasn't a trace of it weather wise), it is the battery of benefits that truly set off the summer season on the East End of Long Island.

The 16th annual Body Positive Garden Gala, the first Hamptons event of the season, will be held at the exquisite oceanside home of Jerry Della Femina and Judy Licht on Saturday June 7, from 5 to 8 p.m. Body Positive is a community service organization dedicated to providing services for all people at any stage of HIV/AIDS and assisting newly diagnosed individuals, their partners, families, friends and caregivers.

Several local caterers and chefs such as Anna Adams Caterer and Delaney Oser of Thyme and Again, Southampton, Cynthia Battaglia of Sag Harbor, Brent Newsom Caterer and chef Carlo Russo, Saracen restaurant, of Wainscott, and Charles Razzano of Hicksville donate their time and talent to providing delicious rounds of eatables for the participants.

Don't miss the poolside fun, the great food and refreshments at this sunset gala which has become an annual tradition.

ROASTED VEGETABLE LAHVOSH ROLLS

Delaney Oser of Thyme and Again Caterers in Southampton offers a contemporary and timely lahvosh roll. Key to her presentation is to use a colorful mix of vegetables.

Yield: About 24 1-inch pieces

1 16 ounce container ricotta cheese
1/4 cup finely chopped fresh basil
Zest of 1 lemon
1 cup minced roasted vegetable mixture: any combination of eggplant, carrots, red or yellow peppers, zucchini, etc.
Coarse (kosher) salt and pepper to taste
4 sheets soft lahvosh rolls or 4 large whole wheat wraps

1. In a mixing bowl combine the ricotta, basil, lemon zest and vegetables and stir to mix. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

2. Divide the mixture and spread evenly on each lahvosh in a thin layer leaving a 1-inch border at the top. Roll from the bottom up. Repeat with remaining mixture. It is best to put the rolls in the freezer to firm up before slicing. Slice each wrap on the diagonal into 1-inch pieces. Arrange on platter garnished with cherry tomatoes and serve at room temperature.

SHRIMP AND CORN FRITTERS WITH SPICY REMOULADE

Cynthia Battaglia of Distinctive Catering, a full service caterer in Sag Harbor shares one of her special recipes with Cajun influence.

Makes 12 hors d'ouevres size portions or 6 as a first course.

For the remoulade

1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons drained horseradish
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1/4 cup diced scallion
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 medium clove garlic, minced

For the fritters

1 large ear of corn husked
6 ounces raw shrimp, peeled, de-veined and chopped
1/2 cup alfalfa sprouts
1/4 cup shredded carrots
3 large garlic cloves, minced
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 tablespoons canned unsweetened coconut milk
1 large egg
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
4 tablespoons vegetable oil

1. In a mixing bowl combine the ingredients for the Remoulade. Can be made ahead and refrigerated until ready to use. Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

2. Remove kernels from cob and cook in boiling water for 2 minutes; drain.

3. In a large bowl mix corn, shrimp, sprouts, garlic, salt, pepper and cayenne. Whisk coconut milk with the egg and stir into the shrimp mixture. Add the flour and stir until thoroughly incorporated.

4. Heat oil in a large heavy skillet over medium heat. Using a 1-tablespoon measure drop mixture into skillet then flatten to 1 1/2 inch rounds. Do in batches as necessary and not crowd pan. Cook fritters until golden on both sides and transfer to paper towels to drain as they are done. Serve hot with a dollop of the Remoulade on top.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish By Aji Jones

While you traverse Montauk Hwy. this summer, drop in to Captain Phil's East End Clambakes (726-5360). Open for business this week in Southampton at the location formerly known as Fletcher's Sweet Sensations, Captain Phil has moved his catering scene to these new digs and can now offer meals to go. Customers can pick up a lobster dinner ready to eat within hours of their call, perfect for those of you with a busy summer schedule. Ask Phil about his Costa Rica fishing trip this past winter. Captain Phil's is open Thursday and Friday from 3 to 10 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday from noon 'til 10 p.m.

And listen: Belle's East (204-0300), a new restaurant located in Southampton at the former Hansom House, is open and serving classic New Orleans style Cajun food. "Didi" Jones is the chef who made Belles Café happen in Westhampton along with co-owner Jennifer McPadden. (Order a side of succotash and tap your feet!)

Also new, Jimmy Farrell's Steak House (288-5700) in Westhampton just opened this past Wednesday. Eastport resident, Nancy Farrell, has teamed up with her sister-in-law, Marianne, and chef Andreas Brundler (from Cal's on West 21st St.) to offer a stylish new carnivore palace designed by Craig Walter. Bring an appetite and a toothpick!

A new restaurant will be moving in to the spot formally known as Peconic Coast. Ed "Jean Luc" Kleefield owner of Jean Luc Manhattan, has taken over with plans to open Jean Luc East around the Fourth of July.

There are some new happenings over at Mary Jane's (324-8008) in East Hampton. Visit five times for lunch and the next one is free. Lunch is served daily beginning at 11:30 a.m. Also, Mary Jane's is now serving Sunday brunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The buffet brunch costs $16.95 a person; only $8.95 for kids. Choose from assorted pastries, fresh fruit, smoked salmon, ham, potatoes, assorted desserts, pancake station, omelet station, and more.

Next time you're on The North Fork make sure to check out Pepi's (765-6373) in Southold. Serving fine northern Italian cuisine, Pepi's is open seven days a week for lunch, dinner and even late-night dinning.

Tickets are on sale now for the Family Service League's annual Taste of the Hamptons summer event on June 28th, from 5 to 8 p.m. A Taste of the Hamptons is a gala of local cuisine and wine held at the beautiful Wölffer Estate in Sagaponack. Dining In The Hamptons

The Perfect Picnic: Paul Evans Caterers

The Hampton season, and all of the splendor it brings, is upon us once again! We are ready for it to start! Pack up the apartment, fill the summerhouse with fresh flowers, and anticipate all of the excitement a new season offers!

Compared to the long and very cold winter doldrums coupled with the political and economical climate we endured, sitting in endless traffic on the Long Island expressway is a breeze! All of us are ready to enjoy the beauty and serenity that our Hampton communities represents with even more gusto this year! The opportunities of whirlwind activities or just relaxing are our most important decisions and concerns.

Visually the towns on the East End and North Fork could not look better at the start of spring... The trees are blossoming, the houses are freshly painted, the perennials in the garden are beginning to come to life, the boats are in the harbor and all of the details and rituals that bring a sense of refinement into our lives to start the season beautifully are in the works. Now the fun starts! Before your social calendar fills up with attending others' events, you need to prioritize when you want to entertain family and friends. Celebrating special events and enjoying the comfort and familiarity that our homes bring to us is always important. A birthday bash, an anniversary, a charity event, a wedding, these are all major events that take time and effort to pull off properly. You can do it, with a sense of calm and organization!

In this respect, as an event planner, I get so many calls to assist with the endless frenzy of May to October events that will take place. Besides the milestone acknowledgements, there are numerous occasions that require skill and planning, a casual luncheon by the pool, a wine country buffet featuring local Long Island wines and extraordinary cuisine to compliment each wine, a soiree dining under the stars, a classic sophisticated cocktail party, imaginatively designed with contemporary hors d'oeuvres, a barbecue of fresh lobsters and steamed littleneck clams on the beach. Other unique ideas such as picnic hampers with clambake components to take the beach, a box lunch filled with delicious delicacies to take to the park or the ultimate tailgating luncheon at The Hampton Classic or any of the exquisite vineyards that are available to enjoy.

Something else to consider are the many locations other than your home to plan an event, if that will put you at ease. Various rentals of estates on bluffs, beachfront cottages or historic barns overlooking vistas are stylish and creative alternative sources that are available as special backdrops.

In planning these events, enjoy the process and the end result and know there is no finer place to entertain and be part of, than our beautiful Hampton community! Good seasonal fresh food that says summer and great friends make a sensational mix whether you have a specific reason to celebrate or not!

Celebrating Our 8th Season!!

HOMEGROWN WITH BRIAN HALWEIL

The Funky Chickens of Amagansett

It's 8 a.m. and a motley crew is about to explode from the chicken coop at Quail Hill Farm in Amagansett.

Josh May, a farm apprentice, opens the gate and some stir-crazy birds leave to start their day. Most of the flock gathers around at the feeder, which Josh has just replenished.

Josh claims that talking to chickens helps them enormously. "But I talk to anything so I'm probably not the best person to ask," he confesses. He collects the half dozen eggs laid the night before and layers new sawdust into the wood cubbies where the hens nest.

As the birds come out of the dappled and dusty coop and into the cool sunlight, the full dimensions of this flock become clear. Among 45 hens (and one fortunate rooster) there are fifteen distinct breeds. Together they look like extras from the Muppet Show with floppy appendages and jarring colors.

The cast includes Golden Laced Cochins and Barred Cochins, covered with parallel bars of alternating dark and light colors that shimmer like MC Escher paintings. Cochins are originally from China (like all chickens) and were introduced in the 1860s into England where they are called "Pekins."

The Buff Orpingtons, a British breed, are the color of pure gold. The Silver Spangled Hamburgs sport greenish-black spangles on silvery-white plumage. The Rhode Island Reds and New Hampshire Reds, are handsome birds the color of bricks, which were an old-time favorite on American farms.

The Araucana hens, whose name comes from the Indian tribe in Chile where they were first discovered, have tufts of feathers growing from their ears like mutton-chops. (Yes, chickens have ears.) Araucana have become famous for laying "Easter" eggs in shades of blue and green.

At the large end of the scale, there's the Black Giant, an imposing breed developed in New Jersey that could be a bouncer for a bar in the same state. The Black Tailed Buff, a Japanese breed with golden plumage and a long black tail like a mocking bird, is among the most diminutive.

Some have large cock's combs; others have none. Some have long tails; others are "rumpless." Some have naked legs and others have feathers on their feet, which fan out like bell-bottoms. The Naked Neck Transylvanians or Turkens look like a cross between a turkey and a chicken and are the unfortunate result of breeders selecting for a bird with a featherless neck that's easy to ring.

First prize for showiness goes to the Golden Polish, the Sir Elton John of the flock with blue-iridescent legs and a "top hat" of feathers that it struts like a Las Vegas showgirl. This United Nations of chickens is not invariably diplomatic. "They're not always nice to each other, " says farm apprentice Kerry Loeffler with some remorse. "There is a pecking order, you know." She points to some feathers from the Golden Poles top hat.

Quail Hill's rooster is a White Cochin, smaller than many of the hens, whose mellow and nonagressive demeanor is highly unusual for roosters, but may result from his formidable harem. He chills in his head-to-toes downy plumage like a plush white Phat Farm leisure suit.

All the birds are rare breeds, which means they have fallen out of commercial favor, and their populations have reached perilously low levels. They won't endure the standardized rigors of modern chicken farming, but thrive under a range of other conditions. Think of them as a genetic insurance policy to ensure that we still have eggs regardless of what chicken diseases emerge or how our climate changes. But it's the Jim Henson quality that largely explains why Quail Hill keeps the birds.

"I'm not sure which came first, the hen coop or the tire swing," says Scott Chaskey, officially known as the Preserve Manager but who prefers the title "farmer." "But they're built in the same place." When school groups or the children of members visit the farm, they immediately flock to the coop.

But the birds have multiple purposes like Quail Hill itself, set up by the Peconic Land Trust in 1990 as the first community farm managed by a land trust. Quail Hill has grown to include 25 certified organic acres and provides summer and winter subscriptions to 150 families.

The roaming chickens help to control farm pests and scouring the soil. Matt Celona, the field manager, points to the dirt floor of one greenhouse that is thoroughly weeded. "The hens take dust baths, keep down aphids and weeds, and help prepare the soil for our winter greenhouse crops," Matt says.

Matt would like the chickens to roam the entire farm, but predators are always lurking. "Red-tail hawks have swooped down and grabbed chickens in broad daylight," Matt says. Raccoons and stray dogs are a problem at night. "It only takes one stray dog to lose fifteen chickens in fifteen seconds."

And then there are the precious eggs that reflect the diversity of the hens and range in color from the ordinary white and brown to the more unusual turquoise, deep olive and even pink. "The eggs are a bonus," says Matt. Members get a half-dozen eggs on a first-come-first-serve basis, but they consistently run out. (Other local sources of eggs and butchered chickens include North Sea Farms off Noyac Road and Iacono Farms on Long Lane in East Hampton.)

Hens start laying around 18 to 20 weeks after they hatch and production peeks after the first year of life. But Quail Hill is run more like an old age home for chickens. "We don't kill our birds, so some are four and five years old," says Matt. Every few years, Quail Hill orders new chicks to bring in some new blood. But, unlike more industrial egg operations, Quail Hill does not use artificial lighting and hormones to enhance egg laying.

Starting a flock is remarkably easy and inexpensive, as 4-H kids across American can attest. Twenty-five female hatchlings will cost you between $35 and $50, depending on the breed. Murray McMurray, the oldest rare breed hatchery in the United States, ships birds by airmail to arrive at your post office the following morning, and provide a peeping chorus for appreciative mail carriers. Murray McMurray (www.mcmurrayhatchery.com) also sells ducks, turkeys, pheasants and other fowl, as well as feed, feeders, waterers, brooders, and paraphernalia like the Hom-Pik-Deluxe automatic feather picker which it calls "the best backyard automatic picker you can buy."

For those not ready for their own flock, a few Quail Hill member shares are still available, but they're going fast.

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

I know one thing for sure; the shops sold plenty of umbrellas, rain jackets and rain hats this rainy Memorial Day weekend. I was in Southampton on Sunday and couldn't even find a parking spot. Yikes...Rain or shine, the visitors were shopping their wallets off...

Time for a new flagpole? The flagpole specialists, Nautique National Flag on Montauk Highway in Westhampton has it all. From flags; custom, fun, nautical, historic, national, custom, to weathervanes, cupolas, windsocks and so much more. Stop in, you will be surprised what you will find here.

Check out Jimmy's fall preview that promises to be one of the hottest collections yet! Jimmy's Westhampton Beach at 16 Main Street is offering Roberto Cavalli's Fall 2003-line trunk show this weekend. Yes!

Stop in at Taman Batu Exotic World Imports on North Highway in Southampton for some of the fines statuary in the Hampton's. There are unique hand-carved lava stone, quality teak and mahogany, river stone and river stone tiles, to name just a few items. Love the coconut wood teahouses and gazebos. I want one! Give a call at 631-404-6054 or log on to www.tamanbatu.com

Stop in at Stubbs & Wootton on Main Street in Southampton, for those comfy scuffs to walk all the Main Street's in the Hampton's with. The Scuff 's are lovely fine leather bottomed espadrilles that make your feet love the walk...

Captain Phil's East End Clam Bake was sure busy last weekend and will be again this weekend with his famous seafood specialties to go...Go where? Home, where the heart is...Located on County Road 39 in Southampton (formerly the location of Fletcher's Sweet Sensations), you can get yourself, family and friends a delicious lobster dinner, shrimp platters, crab cakes, seared tuna to mention a few...Call the Captain at 726-5360 for orders and info. Mmmm good!

I stopped in at Walpole Woodworkers at Whitmore's Garden Center on Montauk Highway in Watermill and had to fight the urge to buy almost every garden accessory I saw. There is a cool $25 off any lantern, a virtually indestructible mail box in very neat colors, $50 off on two classic adirondack chairs, 10% off al arbors in thirteen standard styles and 10% off Lilliput play houses, just to mention a few. I love the pergola and am racking my brain where to put it on my property. No fear, I'll figure it out!

Christian K. Andrews' Bridgehampton warehouse location is having a first ever-major sale on a treasure trove of Chinese antiques, furniture and accessories from Friday, May 30 through Sunday, June 1. Discounts will range from 40% to 50% off their large selection of absolutely everything including baskets, buckets, boxes, dressers, chests, curios, chairs and rugs. Located at 5 Tradesman's Path (off Butter Lane), give a call for more info at 537-2877. This is a goodie!

Jean Sinenberg Prestige Show from Hampton's Antiques Festival and Sales is kicking off the season for sure with the 2003 12th Annual Garden Antiques Show & Sale at the Bridgehampton Community House on Main Street in Bridgehampton. Beginning Thursday evening, May 29 the show features a Gala evening preview party from 6 to 8 p.m. to benefit East End Hospice and then the show will run through Sunday, June 1. As usual, great refreshments and wine will be served courtesy of some of the finest local restaurants with 100% off the $25 admission fee donated to East End Hospice. Now the nitty gritty of the sale...Look for some of the most beautiful garden furnishings, statuary, urns, wicker, rattan and cast iron. Also furnishings for the pool house and antiques dealers from all over the country will be displaying their most outstanding pieces. Mark your calendar so you don't miss this one!

At London Jewelers on Main Street in East Hampton I found I could not resist the charm bracelet from the London Silver Gallery. Prices start at $50 and worth every penny.

Cole Haan is buckling up with their buckle mule in soft calfskin. Great summer colors in grass, sunset, stone and black for a mere $155. Comfy indeed!

Off the beaten path a bit, at California Sunshine Swimwear Super Store at Tanger II look for year 'round swim and cruisewear at good discount prices. Choose from over 10,000 swimsuits, matching cover-ups and accessories in sizes extra small to 40E. How 'bout that one? Fit is never a problem here, they have sizes for everyone including men. Get going!

Have you seen the very rare, delicate beauty and elegance, the Chakra Necklace by Noel yet? Oh my! Such a spiritual find. It is handcrafted in England, is original and a limited edition. There are seven rare stones that are hand polished each one with a special meaning, strung on a dark, smooth cotton and nylon cord. You should wear it daily to bring you balance of the body and life. Need to know more? Click on to www.ChakraNecklace.comand the rest will be history. Guess who just got one?

Well off and running again! I am meeting John for dinner tonight at Witch's Rock on County Road 30 in Southampton. You ain't seen nothin' yet, 'til you see this one! Ooops... Shouldn't give away my secrets.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Operation: Boat Fisher

Over Memorial Day weekend I went on an adventure. It was my last weekend that I had at college and I decided to spend it the way I normally do. My buddy Peter and I were playing video games in his dorm room when he got a phone call. I was frustrated because we were at a really serious part in the game Splinter Cell on X-Box. (By the way this game is incredibly cool. I highly recommend that you play it sometime. You are soldier for the government and you go on all of these top-secret missions. They give you night-vision goggles right from the get go. Night-vision goggles man!)

Peter answered the phone and went off to the corner of the room. I really wanted to take over his game so I started playing while he was on the phone. I wasn't really paying attention to what he was saying. Something about a boat, no, he wants to go fishing over Memorial Day weekend? That doesn't make any sense. It is going to rain all weekend they are saying. I decided that it was none of my business and needed to pay more attention to the problem at hand. Beat Tom Clancy's Splinter Cell. My country was calling me. I needed to complete this mission or the free world as we know it would end. I needed all my wits, all of my courage and stealth. I was in tune with the controller, I was one with it. There was no way that this guy in the limousine that I needed to sneak up on and interrogate with my silenced handgun to his head was going to notice me. Steady now, walk slowly up to him, steady, don't make any noise. If I make any noise I will lose the element of surprise thus ending the entire mission. Stay calm, here we go. I'm three feet behind him. Two feet behind him, one foot, ugh the suspense was killing me. Here it is, the final part of this mission, all I needed to do was hit the "A" button and I could interrogate the driver of this evil dictator, find out where the nuclear weapon is, then jump in my helicopter and get out of there.

"DAVE!"

"Aw man, Peter! You just made me screw this up. The mission is over, the guy saw me. What the hell is wrong with you man! I was right there, the guy hadn't seen me. I was in the crouch position and everything! We have spent the past half-hour trying to interrogate this guy." I was so angry.

"I know, I know. But listen, do you want to go with me to Fishers Island?"

"Fisher what?"

"Fishers Island, it's an island."

"Really. I wonder where they get the name from."

"No man. We are going to go there. My grandfather has a house there and my Dad needs me to drive the boat from Connecticut to Fisher's Island tonight. We have to get to Connecticut so we can pick up the boat."

I thought for a second. "Peter, what the hell is there to do on Fisher's Island. It is five o'clock. It will be dark by the time we get to Connecticut."

"Think of it as a mission that we need to accomplish."

I raised an eyebrow, "Like a secret mission?"

"Yes."

"Like a Tom Clancy Splinter Cell mission or a James Bond 007 mission?"

"Think of it as both."

"Well why didn't you say this before? I get to be James Bond."

We were off in two seconds. I dropped the controller threw on my jacket and headed for the car.

After driving like two college secret agents, the two of us made it to a boatyard in Connecticut. It was getting dark and really rainy. It was kind of scary in a way. We got to the boat, a fishing boat, in the pouring rain.

I looked at Peter and asked, "We are taking a fishing boat to Fisher's Island huh?"

"Shut up, Dave."

Peter shoved the keys in the ignition roughly. We were pretty cranky and the Taco Bell food that we ate on the way down was not sitting pretty. The boat wasn't starting. It wasn't even making a noise. I recognized the problem as a battery problem.

"We need to jump it."

I ran off in search of a battery. After about twenty minutes of searching Peter found one. I think that he casually borrowed it from anther boat. I ran back to the car got the jumper cables. It was pouring. We started rigging the jumper cables to the battery. It

East End Kids: What's Happen?

By Emily Post
(with some help from David Post and Katlean de Monchy)

WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?

There has been a baby boom and all these parents with their young children – present company included – are out here in the Hamptons and trying to figure what to do activity-wise. Now we can't be like mom here who goes to soirees where moguls and women in designer dresses munch on hors d'oeuvres. We want to have some real fun!

So we have developed this column in our three voices to cover events, activities and parties. A cool assignment for a kid – going to parties. Hurray!

Memorial Day weekend offered some good, albeit wet, events.

Saturday's bad weather did not put a damper on our attending LET'S PLANT SUNFLOWERS at the Bridgehampton Public Library on Main Street. The planting was held downstairs, away from the serious readers upstairs. Here kids were allowed, even encouraged to get dirty, first decorating a planter, then adding lots of dirt (see I told you) and planting a sunflower seed in the planter. We all took home our planters and maybe next year we'll have a sunflower festival. The event was long enough to engage the kids and short enough to satisfy moms and dads.

Here are a few of the events on our KID-FRIENDLY calendar for the Summer of 2003. I look to you kids and parents to be interactive and tell us about events so hopefully we can cover them. We'll see you there – look for the kid with camera, pad and crayons.

was really raining hard now. We worried about being electrocuted to death.

"I'm not touching these things after it's connected," I said.

"Me neither," Pete said.

We rock-paper-scissored for it. I lost. He wouldn't budge on my demands for a two-out-of-three round. I took a big gulp – this was it. I was going to be electrocuted to death all because I had been easily convinced that moving Peter's Grandfather's boat across Long Island sound was a combination mission of both James Bond and Tom Clancy's Splinter Cell. Well, life had been good so far, I can't complain, it is not a big deal if this is the end.

Thank God it wasn't.

The boat roared a glorious, triumphant I-can-still-operate roar. The lights lit up, it came alive like an Austin Martin. It was beautiful. The rain, the engine, the engine smoke. I high-fived Peter, untied the ropes and off we went. We were like Batman and Robin on the Bat-boat in the middle of the night. We were the unstoppable-boat-transporting-force. Nothing could stop us. I turned to Peter to say some encouraging words. He then looked at me funny. "What's the matter Pete?"

"I just realized something."

"What?"

"When we drop the boat off at Fisher's, how are we going to get back to Connecticut?"

Looks like we had ourselves another mission.

Ross School's class of 2003 joins our alumni from two previous graduating classes who are enrolled at nearly 100 world-class colleges and universities. At the heart of our educational philosophy is the firm belief that all students can become successful learners. The school is a dynamic learning environment in which children in grades 5 through 12 can acquire the skills needed to succeed in our rapidly changing society. Join us for an evening to learn more about the opportunities your child can enjoy at Ross School as it expands to serve more students this fall.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

SLAMMED

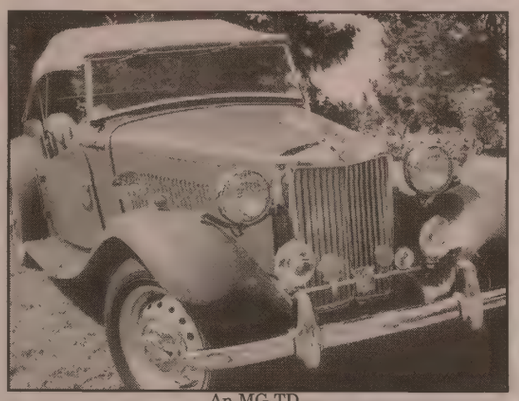
Every time I see a lowered and hot-rodded Honda or Toyota buzzing along the highway, these modified or, as the expression goes, "slammed" rice rockets remind me that they are the twenty-first century equivalent of hot rods of the past.

It was perfectly sociably acceptable to lower a '49 Ford or Mercury. As far as loud exhaust pipes were concerned, like today, every teen with a driver's license and car savvy put dual exhaust and loud mufflers on his car.

Again, like today, certain vehicles were more desirable than others to customize. As mentioned, the Fords and Mercs were the most popular. It wasn't 'til 1955, the year that Chevrolet introduced its new V-8 engine, that Chevrolets were hot-roddable.

People were always looking for more performance and ways to make their cars special. I had a 1952 MG-TD with an engine that had seen better days. It was a common engine swap to put a later model MG-A engine into the car, but I wanted even more performance, so I installed an engine and transmission from a Triumph TR-4. The original MG-TD engine had 54 horsepower. The Triumph motor produced ninety. Needless to say, with almost twice the horsepower, my MG was quite fast. But there were problems. Chassis engineering was an unknown science in those days, and early MGs all had separate metal frames that were very flexible. The entire body would actually twist over bumps, and in fact was considered part of the suspension. (Note: The chassis was so primitive that the part of the frame holding the metal body onto the chassis was made of wood!) Long story short, the Triumph engine in the chassis had twice the torque of the original MGs, and every time I gave it gas, the chassis would twist. This twist would affect the steering, and the car would literally change lanes by itself. It was disconcerting, but the car was so fast that I put up with this idiosyncrasy by compensating for this dangerous steering behavior.

One would have thought I learned my lesson with engine swaps, but I did a similar thing with a 1949



An MG-TD

Mark 5 Jaguar Drophead convertible. Even though this car is valuable today, in those days it was worth nothing as a used car. I think I paid around $500 for mine, mainly because it had a blown engine. I replaced the troublesome Jaguar six-cylinder engine with a 1949 V-8 engine from an Oldsmobile. (The conversion cost me more than the Jaguar!) The Jag wasn't much faster, because it was probably heavier than the Oldsmobile, but it was very dependable. The only real problem I had was that it overheated in traffic. But then again, all Jaguars, even with their original engines, overheated in traffic.

There were lots of "slammed" sports cars. When you really think about it, wasn't the Shelby Cobra really a hot rod AC Ace? Paul Newman drove a Volkswagen Beatle with a Porsche 356 engine in its tail. In fact the Porsche factory itself produced hot rods. For a lot more money, the "right" customer could order a factory modified 356 series car with a fire-breathing Carrera 4-cam engine. These cars were relatively fast when compared to stock Porsches, but were not very streetable. The few Carrera-engined Porsches I've been in would clog their spark plugs in the slightest traffic, and barely run. They were happiest at around 7,000 RPM. In many ways, they were crude conversions, not unlike my own.

Mercedes had a hot-rod camshaft for its incredible 300SL Gullwing. It only added twenty horsepower, so I've always wondered why it was even an option on this expensive car.

Jaguar offered engine options on its XK-120, 140 and 150 series. Mainly consisting of dual exhausts and a higher compression cylinder head. Wire wheels were sometimes part of the package.

There were many owner modifications that could be made. Sport exhaust pipes were the most common. Adding carburetors with custom manifolds was another. Visually, one could add a sport mirror, or perhaps driving lights on the front bumpers.

Superchargers were available, but not commonly used. Believe it or not they were most popular on those 54 horsepower MGs, for obvious reasons. Forget turbochargers, they were still forty years in the future for automotive applications.

So the next time you spot a lowered and decal-draped Honda bellowing down the highway with an exhaust pipe the size of a tuba, just hold this thought: The more things seem to change, the more they remain the same.

Your Own Private Pub

The best bar I have ever seen was in the basement of my friend's uncle's house in Boulder, Colorado. The bar stretched against the entire back wall, curved along the wall and was made of a mahogany wood. Everything was done by hand. He had three kegs (including Fat Tire, the best beer you will find in the States), and two shelves of liquor, including Belvedere Vodka and Johnny Walker Blue Label.

Having a bar in-home is as essential as a bathroom, and no home is ever really complete without one. But how you go about putting it together depends on what you want to accomplish. The first thing you need to decide is whether you want to build it yourself, hire a contractor to do it, or simply buy a pre-made, ready to order bar. Then you also have to decide what kind of bar you want to install. Not all the bars have to run across the entire length of a wall. It could just be a little nook-and-cranny type bar. Or, perhaps you feel like a wine-bar, a keg bar, a wet-bar. How you will use the bar has a lot to do with the way it should look and how much it will cost. A bar can cost anywhere from a few grand into the tens and twenties. It depends on how far you want to take it. A sound system can cost ten grand on its own. But that is a whole different article.

If you are going to use a private contractor, he will take care of most of the work himself, though obviously it will cost more in the long run. You simply need to agree on the plans. If you are going to build it yourself, you need to find a place that will sell all the necessary parts. It will be cheaper, but a whole lot more time-consuming. Then you have to decide what you want; like if you want a rail to put your feet on or what kind of wood for your bar top. I had one friend try to make a bar-top out of used bottlecaps. He tried to spell Budwesier. He never finished it. I think it was because he had to finish all the beers to get the bottlecaps.

There are, however, several standard type designs that you can generally go by. A California style bar, for example, has several arches in the back wall, whereas a Chicago style bar has one long mirror on the wall behind the bar. A Cali-bar also has the entranceway on the left, when facing the bar. The Chicago has it on the right. The New York bar is more rounded about the corners, with nothing notable on the back wall, but a New Orleans is rectangular and open on all ends, with a ceiling held up by pillars at the corners in the French style. I think this leaves more room for the dancers to take off their shirts. The English Pub is similar to the New Orleans style, with the pillars and the ceiling, however it is only open on three sides, with a wall on the back of the bar.

These are not necessarily ready-made bars, but they are styles you can choose from to start the project. Doing it on your own is something of a task. It took my friend's uncle in Boulder six months of hard work. However, he also stained the glass of the light covers on the ceiling. In fact, he built everything in the bar except the pool table and the video games, though I am sure he could have if he wanted to.

What you put in your home is vital to the design of your house. A bar can make a home. And then you never have to leave to spend seven dollars on a beer at the local bar. Instead, you can bring everyone to you. It can be like when Homer Simpson opened a bar in his garage. That was a good episode.

A Kitsch Before Dying

Pink Flamingos might give you only visions of the neighbors with the broken down Desoto parked on the front lawn, alongside the old couch perched atop cinderblocks where they continuously sat throwing their crushed Pabst Blue Ribbon empties at passers-by, but then you've always lacked vision. Even if the genius of John Waters escapes you, decorating a lawn can be a past-time worthy of Andy Warhol or at least the Museum of Bad Art (MOBA) in Boston.

In 1957, Don Featherstone was just a young man fresh out of art school following the cry of "Plastics!" later echoed by Benjamin in The Graduate. He worked in the garden department of the plastics company, Union Products when he came up with the design for the original pink flamingos – two birds side-by-side, one elongated neck up and one bending over. Up until a couple of years ago the flamingoes sold by Union Products still bore Featherstone's signature.

Once made only out of bronze, stone or concrete and strictly the domain of the wealthy, lawn ornaments changed dramatically with the advent of plastics. Featherstone became an unwitting working class hero when he was given the assignment of designing affordable 3-D lawn ornaments and came up with the flamingos after first attempting a duck. The flamingos were patterned after photos in National Geographic magazine, and have changed little over the past 40-plus years save color variation. In the eighties Featherstone sanctioned blue flamingos to combat overzealous community watch groups that banned pink flamingos in their neighborhood.

Taking overzealousness to new levels is the service at www.flamingosurprise.com. The service secretly covers (and I mean complete coverage; we aren't talking about three or four figures here) your victim's... er... chosen recipient's lawn with pink flamingos. They will show up after midnight with truckload of the plastic icons and have the deed done before 6 a.m. the next morning. And the sender can remain completely anonymous. To quote the site, "Just think of how surprised that special someone will be to wake up to a yard full of pink flamingos cavorting on the lawn." Somehow, I'm not sure if surprised is the right word. The service also specializes in lawn ornament removal.

Another garden kitsch icon, the garden gnome has been in the news lately. Gnomes seem to have a penchant for travel. A gnome named Gnorman in Cambridge England served as the inspiration for the traveling gnome in last year's hit French film, Amelie. Gnorman disappeared for an entire summer only to return with a bag of souvenirs and a photo album of his travels, which apparently took him as far away as Cuba.

More threatening gnome gnapping gnastiness can be found from the France-based Garden Gnome Liberation Army (FLNJ) and the North American Gnome Liberation Front (GLF). These shadowy groups are dedicated to the freedom of garden gnomes. The groups have been responsible for the liberation of statues from lawns and gardens across Europe, where the FLNJ operates, and North America, where the GLF operates. The GLF has recently gone underground claiming that it is under pressure from anti-terrorist legislation.

As of press-time no group has stood up to take a stand for the rights of "granny fannies," the cut-outs of women bent over exposing their bloomers for all the world to see common in gardens and vegetable patches.

The modern day kitsch aesthete need not be limited to the classics. Bad taste knows no bounds, and the latest in lawn accoutrements range from a fairly substantial W.C. Fields-esque figure leaning drunkenly against a working lamp-post that can be installed in your yard to a low-fi plastic Bela Lugosi lawn ornament with red light-up eyes.

Creating The Perfect Rose Garden

A rose garden can always fit in your landscaping project. Decide first whether you need climbers, bush roses or hybrid tea roses to fill your planting spaces. Certainly, there will be a place for roses in your garden.

Climbing roses can easily grow to cover a wall, fence, post/pillar or trellis. New Dawn is a climbing rose frequently used as an impressive backdrop. It boasts graceful, arching canes that carry beautiful light pink flowers when in bloom.

Roses can be planted as a ground cover to dress burms and hills. Ground cover varieties include the White Moon River and Red Ribbons. Ground cover roses are hardy, carefree and fast spreading.

Shrub roses can be of one single variety, mixed, or combined with perennials and annuals. One of the most versatile shrubs is Sea Foam (white). Use it as a specimen plant, a low hedge, trellis rose, or a pillar rose. There is also a tree type available. Sea Foam needs little care compared to bush types and blooms continually until frost. Herbal flowers, such as lavender, santolina, and nepeta make a happy and healthy companion to shrub roses. These perennials are scented and repeat bloomers. They will keep the rose surrounded in color throughout its entire season. Sweet alyssum, Baby's Breath, Carnation and Artemisia are also excellent flowers to plant with roses.

Hybrid teas are the best choice for a rose garden. Hybrid teas combine the everblooming quality of old tea roses with the hardiness of hybrid perpetuals. A wide color range, large flowers, old rose fragrance and superior cutting features also contribute to their popularity. The creamy white John F. Kennedy, the flame orange Tropicana and the cherry Double Delight are among my favorites of the hybrid tea roses. Like most hybrid tea roses, the blossoms are large and borne continually throughout the summer. The tight and shapely buds start out with a tinge of green, then unfurl to fully double flowers. The flowers turn into color as the petals unfold. The blooms of these roses also offer a pleasing fragrance. Hybrid Tea Roses look their best when surrounded by manicured hedges clipped evergreen boxwood or lavender. Also tall flowers, such as Veronica or Verbena Bonariensis give a strong accent to these types of roses.

Container roses offer you the advantage of putting beauty where you want it. The container itself must be at least eighteen inches in diame-

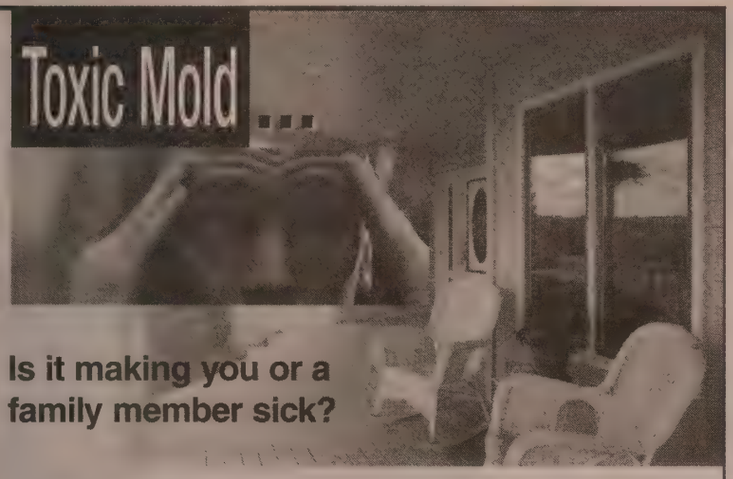
Toxic Mold ...



Is it making you or a family member sick?

Toxic Mold can cause wheezing, coughing, difficulty breathing, nasal and sinus conditions, reddened, burning eyes, blurry vision, headaches, aches and pains and other problems.

Poor ventilation and leaks in the attic...floods or leaky pipes create a fertile environment for toxic molds. Often these microbes go unseen behind walls, under roofs, over ceilings and in the darkest spots in our basements.

For more than twenty years TechClean Industries has provided mold decontamination services for hospitals, research laboratories, pharmaceutical companies, universities and now – homes like yours.

How Do You Want To Spend Your Money?

Either

A Bang & Olufsen Beosound 1 stereo system.

There is no question that Bang & Olufsen offers some of the best designer sound systems in the world. Not only do they sell pre-built systems that you can pick up at some very select locations, including their new residence on Columbus Avenue in Manhattan, but they will also come to your home and build a custom designed sound system to work in every room independently and as a group from one remote. Dangerous if you lose the remote, but think about the inner peace that will come from knowing that there will be only one remote to lose. Unfortunately, we are talking about some major bucks to do it.

A more common, mass-produced system is more likely to be in your future; one for maybe the bedroom, bathroom, living room or kitchen, and if you are lucky, all four. The Beosound 1 system is the perfect solution. Bang & Olufsen are one of the few companies in the world that take form and function into account as much as the technology in itself when designing their products. And the Beosound 1, is no different. For about $1,190 at most locations, but $995 at the one in New York City for a short time, the Beosound 1 has a CD Player, FM Radio, and five speakers, all in one piece. The stereo also comes in four different metallic style colors, including red, light blue, green, gray/aluminum and black, so you can color it to match the room you will have it in most of the time. It can fit on top of a pole for style in your living room, or sit on a shelf in your kitchen so you can listen to some Bach while you cook.

And just because it is in one room does not mean you cannot use it in another. One of the greatest advantages to the Beosound 1 is how easy you can move it from one room to another. The system weighs about as much as a bag of groceries so it real easy to move.

Or

A bottle of Chateau Mouton-Rothschild Vintage 1983 wine.

Rothschild is one of the most famous names in the world of wine. They are also among the most expensive. But if you are going to spend a lot of money on wine, a Rothschild is worth it. With vineyards in almost every country where weather and climate are suitable for making wine, like Almaviva in Chile or California here in the States, Baron Philippe de Rothschild has created more than a dozen different types of wine.

According to the Baron Philippe de Rothschild website, In 1853 Baron Nathaniel de Rothschild bought the Chateau Brane-Mouton vineyard, changing the name of the vineyard to Chateau Mouton Rothschild. Unfortunately, nobody in the family really took care of the vineyard until 1922, when Baron Philippe decided to take over the business. Everything he did was virtually an immediate success. With the Baron's daughter, Baroness Philippine de Rothschild, who is now in charge of the business, there are approximately 300,000 bottles of Chateau Mouton produced each year.

The Chateau Mouton is known for its fine, deep, red color. The bottle of vintage 1983 will have a "elegant, medium bodied wine" that is "moderately rich [with] good depth and some firm tannins," and goes for anywhere between $1,000 and $1,300. In keeping with the Rothschild tradition since 1947, of using well-known artists to design original labels, you will find the Romanian-born, American artists/painter Saul Steinberg on every 1983 label. Steinberg is known for his cartoon work, doing cover art for The New Yorker much of his life.

If you are not a seasoned wine connoisseur, there are some key things to look out for when buying an aged wine, like shoulder and neck levels, and the condition of the capsule and label. Shoulder and neck levels refer to the amount of wine left in the bottle. Any neck level is usually acceptable, but once you start talking about shoulder levels, you should be a little more concerned; the lower the level, the more wine that has evaporated over the years and therefore the worse the seal of the bottle. Similarly, capsule and label conditions will show how carefully the bottle has been preserved. If the capsule is in bad condition, there is a good chance that the wine will be equally poor.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face.....with Annette

Recently I received a little package of the most beautiful scented soaps I have ever smelled. In this day of liquid everything, from shower soap to oils and creams, this was a refreshing switch. The fragrance of these soaps were nothing I have ever had the pleasure of inhaling. Like the commercial says, 'made for a man, but meant for a woman' or something like that, some of these soaps have a slight masculine undertone, but I certainly would suggest women try them. The fine art of using a shaving brush and mug with a hard soap is also encouraged by Caitriona Breslin, present owner of Barclay Crocker. A practice which seemed to fall to the wayside with the introduction of shaving cream in a can is now slowing being revived. I still remember my father using one and hearing the sound in the morning of the brush being swirled around the sides of the mug, getting that soap worked up into a lather. I loved it! Purveyors of luxury shaving products along with fine soaps and toiletries, this Southampton based company is worth a peek. Unfortunately right now, products are only available on her website, but it is so worth a visit! To go into the numerous items available would take a years worth of typing, but I encourage you to either call or write to Caitriona for a really unusual Father's Day gift of just some really different items for your bath or as house gifts. She can be reached at 800-536-1866, or at her website address, www.barclaycrocker.com.

Have you ever heard of Porter's Lotion? This is lotion, well, not really a lotion, more of an oil that isn't oily, sort of a water/oil/lotion, this is getting confusing. It gets worse. The fragrance upon first sniff will set your head back a bit. It is sort of medicinal smelling especially upon the initial inhaling, but then it quickly changes into something pleasant smelling. I first tried it several years ago where I picked up a bottle in one of the Nature Company's stores. They folded or at least left the area where I purchased Porters Lotion and I had to salvage the phone number off the tattered bottle. It was the recent search that made me wonder why this necessary product isn't more readily available or why it is so darn hard to find. It is the absolute best for dry skin that I have ever come across. It makes your skin feel so incredible. It is fabulous for feet, it takes away any bit of dryness left over from the winter of being cooped up in socks and slippers. Good luck trying to find this great product in any shops around Southampton. I wish that some of them would order from this company. But nevertheless, you can order it yourself. They have a web site you can get it from and take time to read the great story as to how this over 60-year-old formula was created. How it was brewed in a barrel in the back of a pharmacy in Montana by a Herber Porter in 1931. The ingredients, which are all pure and natural, include Rosemary, Camphor, Witch Hazel and Greensoap. Visit them at www.porterslotion.com. They have a line of fine products but I highly recommend the Porters Lotion to get started. When you see how great that works on dry skin, skin that has been abuse or overworked in the garden or just from fishing or clam digging, you will want to try and use the rest of the line. As well as the website they can also be reached at 800-806-1161.

On Saturday, May 31, 2003 at 8:30 A.M., the family and friends of Judi Shesh will hold the 3rd Annual Judi Shesh Memorial 5K (3.1 mile) Walk/Run at the Great South Bay YMCA in downtown Bay Shore. Judi was 41 year old when she lost her battle with Breast Cancer 2 year ago. Last year this event brought over 900 men, women and children throughout Long Island to raise over $18,000 for Beast Cancer Research. This year we are please to announce the formation of the Judi Shesh Memorial Foundation. The monies raise by the foundation will be distributed to various local beast cancer organizations and research for a cure.

The Power Of Bioenergy: East Hampton Energy Center

Oftentimes life becomes rather hectic, leading you to ignore the balance within yourself that is needed to properly cope with the stresses of everyday life. With running to the store, to dropping of the kids at soccer practice and then getting to a dentist appointment, all within your one-hour lunch break, to dealing with the bumper-to-bumper traffic and the less-than-ideal weather, it's easy to get caught up in the world and forget about yourself.

But Martha Poli knows how important it is to rid yourself of impurities and keep your inner self in check so that you can face any challenge. And she created the East Hampton Energy Center about five months ago for anyone who wants to realign themselves, cleanse their system or simply escape from the crazy world for a little while to come and explore their deep-rooted energies.

The main intention of the center, according to Ms. Poli, is to detoxify, decongest and regenerate the body. This is accomplished through the use of bioenergetic therapies, meaning that sound, light and water are used to help cleanse and heal the body. All of the therapies are completely hands-off, meaning that it is not a spa or clinic. You can chose to simply come in and detoxify your system to get in touch with yourself once again, or you can come in and experience the three therapies for a fully re-energizing session.

When you enter the Energy Center, where a bamboo door greets you with tranquil open arms, you'll begin your ascent up the stairs into a serene lair of calmness. Soft tunes and the sound of water trickling from the fountain will envelop you. With walls of clay, bamboo floors and silk tapestries, as well as strategically-placed crystals, the Center is truly a place of free-flowing energy.

You will find that each of the three therapies offered, Transmutational, Transformational and Transcendental has its own room, with a distinct ambiance and purpose. Everything has been specifically chosen for the atmosphere of the room, including the brightly-colored curtains that are meant to stimulate various mental and psychological energies.

The Transmutational therapy, which is detoxifying, uses water and photon sounds to cleanse and oxygenate the body. The purpose is to "charge the biofields," or a sort of spring-cleaning for the body. Toxins that you encounter in life, including pesticides and metals, are filtered out into the water. It energizes the lymphatic system, allowing for a rebalancing of your body's energy field.

The second therapy, used to decongest the body, is referred to as Transformational. This is used to help remedy conditions such as bloating. By placing a device on your meridians, it opens up channels, restoring a free energy flow throughout your system.

The third therapy is Transcendental and is used to regenerate the body. It uses a device to induce the body to heal itself. It allows the person to zero in on a more specific ailment, such as the hip of a golfer or a shoulder of a pitcher. It's based on the idea that there is an energetic component to every symptom and by working on that energy, you can help accelerate the healing process.

In addition to these therapies and Gem Stone therapy, Yoga is also offered at the Energy Center. Classes are for both young and old, as well as for the greenthumb and expert, with a varying degree of instruction dependant on the level of expertise. There will be seven classes taught daily by local instructors and city teachers. And Tom Birch, one of the best-known Yogis in the country, will also be teaching at the Center year round.

So if you've always wanted to pick up Yoga, but just never did, or if you feel like you might just need an energy boost, then the East Hampton Energy Center may be a good stop off. Maybe the answers lie amongst the bamboo and stone, deep within yourself.

The Best New Spot To Treat Yourself Right

There is really no way to talk about the Millefleurs Day Spa without also talking about Millefleurs owner, Gina Michael – a renaissance woman who speaks six languages, is a known Tarot Card reader, an acupuncturist, a designer, and has worked for twenty years to create space where people can ease their bodies and soothe their minds. The result of her work is two palatial spas in New York City, and now – luckily for the residents of the East End – last year's addition of a new post in The Omni Health and Racquet Club in Southampton.

As with the other Millefleurs locations, the Southampton spot provides all of the services Gina and her twenty employees are known for. East Enders are able to choose from any of Millefleurs wonderful services including several kinds of Aroma Therapy Massage – including Shiatsu and couple massage – manicures/pedicures, salt and sugar scrubs, and facials. And, of course, there is no missing the signature Herbal Mineral Body Wrap – a treatment I was lucky enough to try – in which a clinician wraps you in warm towels containing a blend of 116 herbs and minerals which, as Michael explains it, serve to remove toxins from the body, providing a deep sense of well being and allowing one to lose between 4 to 10 inches of body fat with each session when combined with a food and exercise regiment for weight loss.

In fact, Gina uses these herb wraps as part of her guaranteed weight loss program for clients, which includes nutritional counseling and the use of herbs.

"It is important to understand," Michael explains from the pedicure room at her Madison Spa, her sweet dog Hami on her lap, "that food directly affects whether you feel boundless energy or lethargic. Certain food contributes to our pain." Michael continues: "We help clients gain control over their health paradigm through education."

While the surroundings in the Omni location aren't palatial like the city locations, East End clients have the advantage of the Omni's indoor pool and the option of home visits. "We'll bring the whole village to you," Michael says. And, this is often exactly what Millefleurs does. One of their services is the Berber Tent parties [photograph enclosed], in which Millefleurs creates unforgettable theme parties for everything from birthday dinners to corporate events to large wedding parties. "We create the feeling of a Moroccan Village," she says – providing the atmosphere, the food, and special services such as Tarot Card readings and Henna artistry. "Our spa services are available as well. Often we provide massage, wraps, salt and sugar scrubs. Last summer we did a party for four hundred people."

Yet another exciting option in is The Millefleurs Thousand Flower Guest House-Hampton Get Away – a farmhouse, which feels out of Southern France with its organic gardens, pool, and breathtaking Dominican marble patio. Michael runs the house like a bed and breakfast, offering weekend packages for couples and singles, including spa treatments and all the meals included, which Michael herself sometimes cooks.

"This is all something I've believed in," Michael says, "something that would help change the world. That I wouldn't have to look outside of my own body to survive."

And this is the sentiment Michael keeps passing on through her work – in two different languages alone while I was sitting there, once talking to a new client in Japanese about caring for the kidneys, another time booking a Berber party for forty people in French.

What's next for Millefleurs? What's on Gina's final frontier? "I'm going to keep providing transformative treatment," she says, which is lucky for her clients. "I also really want to make a film."

Stay tuned. –Laura Dave

Police Blotter

Mother Nature may be crying buckets so far this spring, but some Hamptonians wiped her tears away this past weekend and stuck to some of the East End's Memorial Day traditions. Police received several calls from neighbors in Hampton Bays regarding some weekenders going overboard at a residence on Starboard Road. Officers arrived to find numerous people drinking, most of whom were under-aged. All together, police issued 31 tickets for possession of alcohol by a minor with the intent to drink. The drowning delinqents were accompanied by the tenants of the house and a uniformed security guard who were all charged with similar violations.

This next report, from East Hampton Town Police, dropped a bomb on the list of "Most Unusual Thefts." An Amagansett man called police on Saturday to report a missing missile. He told police that sometime between last Friday and Saturday someone stole a 5-foot-long Falcon Missle that had sat on display in his front yard. The dummy missle had originated from the Korean war and was given to the man as a gift about 5 years ago. He told responding officers that he had heard a vehicle with a loud exhaust speed away from his house that Friday night, but didn't think that anyone would take the $1000 piece of history. Police are patrolling the area more frequently and have issued private security for his neighbor's outdoor tank gallery.

Well, talk about a great way to kick off the summer season. An East Hampton man ran directly from the court house to the police department after another man, who had been his opposition in a court case that day, punched him in the face. An officer took pictures of the injury to file for his case and they began trying to track down the suspect. Later that day the court room romper turned himself in at headquarters.

The caretaker at a Jaqueline Drive home in Amagansett called East Hampton Town Police last Friday after he discovered that someone had stolen a gas-powered grill and a basketball hoop from the home. The $899 worth of summer fun was apparently stolen between last Monday and Sunday. Police are investigating but haven't rebounded with any leading information.

Of all the crewl, heinous things a criminal could think of, this next act of immoral behavior shocked me at first glance. Luckily, police arrived just in time to a 14th Street residence last Sunday to witness children riding minibikes on the street and through a trail. A home owner there called police that day when she saw said children having a good time. The bikes were impounded and the parents were called before the situation got out of control.

Dan's Letters

THIS OLD HOUSE REDUX

Dear Dan,

I appreciate your general interest in architecture and in particular your interest in my former house on Woods Lane. Since becoming an East Hampton resident, now twenty years, I have looked forward to reading your paper every Friday or Saturday morning. I haven't missed many issues and I especially loved your stories about the Nazi U-boat saboteurs and the Fisher venture to build Montauk. I wish, however, you had called me before writing the article This Old House and I could have corrected the many misrepresentations and factual errors in that piece.

In November of 1996 not 1995, I bought the house from the Tillinghest estate. The house would not have lasted the winter, grass was growing in the downstairs, the roof was rotted and leaking, and raccoons were happily nesting. The ceiling of the living room was collapsing. It was unsafe to walk in many of the rooms. I applied for a permit that reduced the size of the house. I eliminated the stacking bathrooms (added in the early 20th century) and the summer kitchen.

As you noted, I had the house lifted so that I could build a foundation to support the structure and circumvent a structural failure. I also decided to rotate the house, since the formal and principal façade of the house faced the Centennial House and not the street. I had room before for a pool without shifting the house. I did not change the two principle facades (except to make the 20th century bays on either side of the entry door symmetrical). I replaced all the windows, doors, plumbing, electrical, siding and roof. I used part of the basement for a garage, since the property was tight. That garage had barn doors that were not automatic (though I wished they were on rainy days).

In order to lift the house, it was necessary to remove all existing walls. Posts and beams remained. The house had been built in at least four stages. The keystone dated 1736 was the oldest piece of the house. A barn had been attached to the house in the 19th century, which accommodated the parlor, living room, and master bedroom. Later additions dated from the early 20th century. I left most of the structure from the barn exposed. The seaweed insulation was removed, as was the newspaper insulation. It was clear that the house had been carelessly renovated and repaired and expanded throughout the years. This had always been a farmhouse and was rustic in character and primarily a utilitarian structure. I loved the character of that house but was aware of the need to seriously modernize it to preserve what remained of the bones. Only those posts and beams had any authenticity and several were damaged. Having taught architectural history and design at Columbia University for the past sixteen years, I did not want to sentimentalize the house.

The house was completed in nine months and we pressed very hard for that completion since my children were very anxious to move into the new house. While there were no dogs scratching at the family room door, there were cats (one born at the Maidstone, was adopted at ARF). We lived in the house until March 2002. My three children had friends living there during the summers, we had Thanksgiving dinners for twenty-five and lively brunches and dinners. The house was published in Elle Décor, Ideat, a French magazine, Wohnen, an Austrian magazine and SpezioCass an Italian magazine. Dalton dance students used it one winter for a dance retreat. Clinton's chief of staff stayed there during one of the President's summer visits. Most summer nights, all seven bedrooms were occupied and the pool was rarely empty.

I had spent a great deal of money on the house and eventually felt that I had to sell it. I was well acquainted with the people I sold it to. (I had several other offers.) I was happy that a rabbi, his wife and ten children would be moving into the house. I also knew that these people appreciated and were enthusiastic about the design of the house. They were so pleased that they asked me to help them rework the house for their much larger family and different needs. I accepted with enthusiasm. After a while this family was building a new house on the old foundations. We have saved whatever beams and posts were salvageable. My new dream is to create a new house for this family now. As you concluded, things come and go and that is the way it is.

I hope you will address these errors and misrepresentations in your forthcoming issue.

Thank you.

Lynne Breslin AIA

Thank you for correcting my misconception on some of these matters. –D.R.

TAKING ISSUE WITH OUR ISSUES

Dear Dan,

On a trip to Bellport, I picked up Dan's Papers latest edition.

You sure let women know what you thought of them. Thanks (but no thanks) for your vote of confidence for us. It's amazing how men are never discussed in that manner.

I can do without Dan's Papers from now on.

WHISTLIN' DIXIE

Dear Dan,

I enjoyed reading the "Wabash Cannonball" lyrics sent in by Richard Fuller in the May 16 issue of Dan's Papers. During my WW II service days, I learned the song from an Army buddy from Memphis, Tennessee. Here is one more stanza I remember and which seems to give strength to the idea that this song was truly a hobo paean:

Here's to Pappy Traxon, may his name forever stand,

And be respected by hoboes forever throughout the land,

His ramblin days are over, the curtain 'round him falls,

We'll carry him back to Dixie on the Wabash Cannonball.

Paul Gillen
Cutchogue

ter, eighteen inches deep and have good drainage. Use a soil mixture including a third each of garden soil, sand and pea moss. Feed with liquid fertilizer and water generous when soil is dry. The Fairy is a classic rose for containers. True to the name it produces clusters of pink blooms all summer. A single stem of the Fairy can hold twenty-five or more buds of mature flowers. It is often used as a patio rose, grown in standard or tree form.

Regardless how you use roses, remember the design principles of height, mix textures, and control color when making plant decisions. Any landscaping can hold many more roses than most people would possibly think. I'm continually finding and creating room for a rose garden in our projects. –Frederico Azevedo

Shellfish Farming Recommended For Southampton. Small-scale shellfish aquaculture can provide marine based livelihoods for commercial fishermen no longer able to make a living harvesting wild stocks. In this way, aquaculture can help preserve a lifestyle crucial to the integrity of many coastal communities. TerrAqua evaluated potential environmental, social, regulatory, policy, economic and productivity issues associated with small-scale commercial aquaculture in Southampton, NY. Our final report included environmental and market assessments, cost-of-production models and results from a survey of various stakeholder groups to determine attitudes, concerns and potential objections. Among the recommendations: create aquaculture "management areas" for transient (mobile) culture gear. For a copy of the executive summary, see http://www.terraqua.org/SHExecSum.pdf

It's Not Just Your View; It's Your Backyard. Sublime 1.7 acre property abutting acres of never-to-be-developed preserve and Gardiner's Bay beyond. The only sound you hear is the twittering of rare water fowl. The only sight you see are the views of Northwest Creek, Northwest Harbor, and Shelter Island. And you see them from virtually every room of the pristine modernist home with 4 bedrooms, open plan livingroom, dining area, and kitchen, hot tub, and studio. Large outdoor deck and patio. Just steps to sandy swimming beach and boat moorings. One of the most unique and beautiful properties on the East End of Long Island. Exclusive. $1,250,000. Call Jennifer D'Auria.
